By the Associated Press

In a communique implying that the defense had somewhat strengthened, although not claiming Nazi offensives had been halted, the Soviet command reported early today that Red armies before Moscow had beaten off heavy German assaults from the west.

At the same time the Russians acknowledged abandonment of Odessa, in the far southern theater on the Black Sea, but asserted the evacuation was made "in perfect order"—a deliberate maneuver, and not one forced by the Germans and Rumanians—who had announced their entry into the city Thursday.

The Germans, however, claimed to have reached Moscow's outlying industrial regions and it appeared that the Soviet leadership, while far from conceding the loss of the capital, was preparing to reorganize for eventual resistance from bases 500 miles or more to the east in the 100,000-square-mile area between the lower Ural Mountains and the Volga.

Stalin Still in Moscow

This plan, understood in London to be still in the making, would, if carried out, give the Germans a vast job to do, even assuming the total conquest of Moscow. One source declared in fact that the Russians if necessary would base ultimate operations from below a line running from Stalingrad on the River Don northeast 1300 miles to Chelyabinsk, which lies behind the Urals.

Some Russian informants implied that the necessities of preparing such a project had been in part responsible for the departure from Moscow to Kazan 450 miles to the east of various principals of the government—a departure still not officially confirmed, but one that by every sign nevertheless has taken place.

Joseph Stalin himself, however, was reported by the British radio be still in Moscow.

As to the battle for Moscow itself, German claims to continued advances were only in general terms and were confined principally to reports that factories, power plants and lignite fields in the city's economic region—at unstated distances west and south of the city—had been occupied.

City May Hear Guns

It was added that assuming the wind was right Moscow's defenders could hear the sound of German guns.

In the far south, the Nazis reported a renewal of heavy activity by the Ukraine offensive pressing eastward from the Donets River toward the Don. Russian counter-attacks were acknowledged, but they were said to have consisted principally of desperate charges by old-fashioned horse cavalry into the Nazi tanks, and all were declared bloodily broken.

The Russians were similarly short on detailed information last night. They did report, however, in dispatches to the official Soviet press, that German thrusts had been smashed somewhere in the vicinity of Vyazma, which is 125 miles west of Moscow, and about Kalinin, 95 miles to the northwest.

The Moscow radio broadcast that Red troops were defending the city's approaches "with great tenacity," and that "the advance has been somewhat slowed down."

It was thus not claimed that the offensives had been halted, and this agreed with the impression in London that the city was about to be enveloped.

Catoe Fights Confession Use As Evidence

Accused Will Take Stand This Morning To Continue Battle

By Robert R. Rand
Post Staff Writer

In a special court session today, Jarvis Theodore Roosevelt Catoe is expected to take the witness stand in District Court and tell Justice James M. Morris why he confessed to police that he raped and murdered Mrs. Rose Abramowitz March 8, in her Sixteenth Street Apartment.

Catoe's testimony will be part of the defense fight to keep his confession from being admitted as evidence.

The issue arose in court yesterday morning when United States Attorney Edward M. Curran asked Sergt. John M. Wise, a witness, what statement Catoe had made to him when arrested.

Defense Attorney Walter M. Shea jumped to his feet, and asserted that "there is serious question as to the admissability as evidence of any statements of the defendant to police."

Duress Is Denied

Justice Morris immediately excused the jury until he could determine whether the confession was acceptable. For the rest of the day, without the jury present, the Government presented a number of witnesses in order to prove that Catoe made the confession freely and was not under threat or duress at the time.

When the court adjourned at 4:45 p. m. yesterday, the prosecution had

Jurors Hear Witnesses in Franking Quiz

Burch Fined $1000; 8-Month-to-2-Year Jail Term Suspended

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Five witnesses familiar with use and abuse of Congressional franks were heard yesterday by the special grand jury on German agents, which has charged that Hitler's chief propagandist in America used franks by the bale.

The all-day hearing was broken only by a brief recess, in which many of the grand jurors went to hear sentence passed on the first German agent they indicted, Frank B. Burch, 67-year-old Akron, Ohio, lawyer.

Justice James W. Morris fined Burch $1000 and sentenced him to eight months to two years in jail, releasing him from the jail sentence on probation, in accordance with a recommendation of Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey.

Agree to Clemency

The prosecutors agreed to clemency for Burch after he pleaded guilty of evading the Registration Act. Their reasons were his age, feeble health and willingness to testify before the grand jury.

Burch promptly paid his fine and left for his home. He must report regularly to the probation officers here by mail.

The grand jury last week indicted George Sylvester Viereck, 56, propagandist for the Kaiser in the World War and for the Nazi regime in this one, charging that he helped or-

Sen. Burton Envisions Capital As Traffic Model for Nation

(Traffic Reform and Street Accidents, See Page 17.)

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Senator Harold D. Burton (Republican), of Ohio, yesterday envisioned Washington as the model "traffic Capital" of the Nation, proposing at the same time that the Federal Government take a greater interest in local highway problems.

The former Mayor of Cleveland, who brought his city national traffic safety recognition during his tenure of office, spoke at a luncheon meeting of the D. C. Advisory Board of the American Automobile Association at the Mayflower Hotel.

He said the District's traffic situation "is not as bad as some people seem to think it is," but added that whatever improvements are necessary should be carried out with a view to making the city an example for the country.

The problem here, said the Senator, is national as well as local because of the vast number of strangers who daily pass through or take up temporary residence while working for the Government.

He suggested three specific moves: First, that Federal authorities be convinced of their responsibilities here; second, that a study be made to determine the city's approach to its own problem, and third, that the National Safety Council be invited to make a survey and submit recommendations.

Senator Burton urged that mu-

Victory by 259 To 138 Reveals First Break in Isolationist Bloc

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday answered Axis attacks on American-owned shipping with an impressive 259-to-138 vote for the President's armed ship bill.

The nearly 2-to-1 passage, largest supporting majority the Administration has received on any comparable test, marked the first substantial break in House isolationist ranks.

Thirty-nine Republicans joined 219 Democrats and one American-Laborite to speed the bill to the Senate and to a Senate Foreign Relations Committee meeting called for Monday.

Only 21 Democrats voted with 113 Republicans, three Progressives and one Farmer-Laborite against passage.

Longer Hearing Besten

Just before the final vote, the House rejected, 257 to 136, a Republican opposition effort to send the bill back to committee for more hearings.

Torpedoing of the U. S. destroyer Kearny combined with strained relations with Japan to bulwark closing Administration arguments, as speaker after speaker slapped at Germany and Tokyo and called for quick defensive action.

As passed by the House, the tersely worded bill repeals the Neutrality Act's Section 8 ban on arming of merchantmen and affirmatively authorizes the President to equip America's 1200 merchant vessels with guns and gun crews.

As nearly three months will be required for the task, with anti-aircraft and antisubmarine guns available, leaders said Senate emphasis will be placed on speed, without broader inroads at this time on other Neutrality Act restrictions.

Connally Calls Session

Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Commitee, en route from Texas to manage Senate expedition of the bill, called his committee to meet Monday to decide on hearings and procedure.

House approval came in an atmosphere of tense appraisal of the latest submarine attack on a United States warship, with Majority Leader McCormack declaring:

"All I know is that an American destroyer has been torpedoed. The exact facts are immaterial to me. There is no doubt in my mind what nation's vessel torpedoed the American destroyer.

McCormack was replying to a charge by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, that the encounter took place in the "war zone" between Iceland and England. Fish, who later voted for the

U. S. Destroyer Limping to Port; Atlantic Patrol Hunting Raider

Post Staff Writer

Warships of the Atlantic patrol kept up an unrelenting hunt last night for the raider which torpedoed the American destroyer Kearny early yesterday 350 miles southwest of Iceland.

As the wounded vessel headed for port under her own power, many officials here interpreted this first successful attack on an American warship during the European war as a Nazi move to spur Japan into new aggressive action in the Pacific.

Dispatches from the 1650-ton new destroyer to the Navy Department indicated there were no casualties among its crew of 180, but little else was known about the incident. Officials explained that the commander of the vessel probably would use his radio as little as possible while limping to port so as not to give his position away to other possible attacking craft.

The Navy did not say whether the damaged destroyer was heading toward Iceland or an American port. Nor did it say what steps were being taken to run down the attacker.

At Hyde Park, N. Y., President Roosevelt told reporters that regular Navy orders applied. The orders he gave to the Navy last September 11, were to hunt down raiders "like rattlesnakes" in American defensive waters and "shoot on sight."

The President declared yesterday that the attack on the Kearny was clearly in the American defense zone.

Nothing was said by the Navy as to the nationality of the raider nor what type of craft it was. Members of Congress, however, quickly assumed that it was a German submarine and talked of retaliation.

Navy men here agreed that the raider probably was a submarine. It was considered unlikely that an airplane would be operating so far at sea or that a surface raider could Reykjavik, Iceland, Oct. 17 (Delayed)—Twenty-nine British survivors of an unidentified vessel torpedoed by a Nazi U-boat west of Iceland were landed in Reykjavik tonight, all suffering from exposure.

They had passed 14 days in an open boat before a trawler rescued them. They said 31 others had started out in another lifeboat. Their story indicated the attack was within the American defense zone.

As Tension Grows

New Tokyo Cabinet Completed, U. S. Prepares to Protect Ships

Some American Cargo Craft Called to Port For 'Instructions'

The United States Navy served notice, in effect, last night that it is ready for a showdown in the Pacific if such a development is in the cards.

With tension between this country and Japan rapidly tightening, the Navy Department announced that some American merchant ships presumably in Asiatic waters had been ordered into port "for instructions regarding their voyages," a phrase which, coupled with the assertion that the vessels will "continue to ply their usual trade" was interpreted as meaning that the Navy will give them ample protection.

Supplementing this action, the department significantly issued a report of "exceptional" progress in the building of Pacific island and Alaskan bases, the wording of which clearly carried assurance to the American people that the system of defense outposts in the Pacific is ready for action.

"In short," the report concluded, "the new Pacific bases program is keeping well apace of the general expansion program of the Navy in building up the Nation's two-ocean fleet to the greatest array of sea power the world has ever seen."

Navy Dispels Rumors

After the Capital for hours had heard reports that all or most United States merchant craft plying the Pacific had been ordered into friendly ports because of the possibility of belligerent developments, the Navy issued a statement saying that: "a very few American merchant ships" have received such orders.

"Any implication that they will not continue to ply their usual trade is entirely erroneous," it added.

This statement was taken as a warning that the increasingly defiant tone of Japanese government elements will not be permitted to interfere with this country's delivering materials to Russia, China and other nations resisting Axis aggresson or with its carrying strategic materials from the Far East to America.

The department, however, sought

Statement of Policy Is Expected From Gen. Tojo Today

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Saturday), Oct. 18.—Lieut. Gen. Eiki Tojo swore in a new Japanese cabinet today with himself as premier, war minister and home minister and Shigenori Togo, former Ambassador to both Berlin and Moscow, as foreign minister of a government reportedly pledged to pursue a strong policy toward the United States and other foreign powers.

General Tojo thus became one of the most powerful premiers in the recent history of Japan, with a firm grip on the internal situation through the home office and an equally strong grasp on foreign policies through the war ministry.

Presented at Palace

Personnel of the cabinet succeeding that of Prince Fumimaro Konoye, which resigned Thursday, was disclosed with the installation ceremonies in the presence of the Emperor at the palace this afternoon.

Gen. Tojo, an admirer of the German military method, chose as his navy minister Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, commandant of the Yokosuka navy yard and former commander of the fleet in China waters.

Other members of the cabinet, which informed sources said was determined to strengthen the national wartime structure, included:

Vice Admiral Ken Tarashima, railways and communications; Okinobu Kaya, finance, a post he held in an earlier Konoye cabinet; Shinsuke Kishi, commerce and industry, a promotion from vice minister of that department; Lieut. Gen. Chikahiko Koizumi, welfare; Michiyo Iamura, justice; Hiroya Ino, agriculture; Kunikhiko Iashida, education, and Maj. Gen. Teeichi Suzuki, minister without portfolio.

Five Held Over

The last five are holdovers in the same positions they had under Konoye, whose government quit in admitted inability to solve grave problems of policy.

New Full-Speed Defense Project Aims at Defeat Of Nazis in 1943

By Alfred Friendly
Copyright, 1941, by The Washington Post

A gigantic "Victory Program," which contemplates doubling present military requirements, telescoping current long-range production schedules into 1942 and repeating the process in 1943, is now being drafted by the Army, Navy and civilian defense agencies.

Objective of the program is the assembly of so many weapons of war and at such a speed that an all-out offensive may be launched against Hitler by the end of 1943.

Although officials were extremely reluctant to discuss the project and insisted that the full estimates have not yet been compiled, it was learned that they are contemplating a staggering production rate, dwarfing previous efforts and even present schedules.

Plane Goal Almost Doubled

Details of the program are closely guarded, but an indication of the size of the projected effort is the estimate of a total of about 125,000 airplanes to be produced here in two years, as compared to present plans for the building of between 70,000 and 75,000 planes in the same period. Of the total aircraft planned under the "Victory Program," 25,000 to 30,000 will be four-engine, long-range bombers, according to one estimate.

Compilation of the estimates, it was said, has been a matter of many weeks, stemming from an order on September 10 of the new super-defense planning agency, the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, for an "all inclusive survey of the Nation's total requirements" plus those of the other nations now fighting the Axis.

At the time the survey was announced by Donald M. Nelson, executive director of SPAB, it was thought the study was merely one which would coordinate the raw material and productive requirements to meet the demands of the present schedules. Instead, it appeared yesterday, the call was for a summation of the all-out requirements necessary to beat Hitler.

Includes Friends' Needs

Accordingly, American resources in materials and manufacturing capacity were collated with those of Britain and other anti-Axis belligerents, and, through a series of trans-Atlantic missions, British, American and other general staff compilations of required finished weapons were totaled.

The results, now being set down for submission to the President and SPAB, indicate the need for tens of thousands of tanks, hundreds more merchant ships, and equipment for huge armies.

From the meager information which officials were willing to disclose yesterday, it appeared that the method being considered to achieve the huge goal is to match presently scheduled deliveries with additional and equal production schedules, set for completion at the same time.

Thus, production of armaments continuing through 1943 under the 60 billion dollar program already

Mother Finds Body

Chevy Chase Boy, 3, Drowns In Neighbor's Goldfish Pond

Three-year-old Harvey A. Wolford, jr., of 4504 Ridge Street, Chevy Chase, Md., went adventuring yesterday and met death in a neighbor's fish pond.

His body was found in the pool by his mother, Mrs. Almeda Wolford, who began searching when a companion returned without him. Members of the Bethesda Rescue Squad worked over the boy for 45 minutes, but were unable to revive him.

According to the story pieced together by Sergt. Joseph Nolte, of the county police, Harvey and his companion, Michael Ford, 3, of 4513 Ridge Street, had been playing together. Mrs. Wolford had not seen the boy for a few minutes and started in search of him. Mrs. Edgar M. Ford helped. Michael could only say that they had been "playing in the water."

HARVEY WOLFORD, JR.

Suddenly, the mother's screams aroused the neighborhood. She had found her child floating in the fishpond on the property of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Greenway, 4512 Stanford Street, which faces Ridge Street on the rear.

Mrs. Ford ran to the pond and pulled the child out. Oliver M. Turner, 4510 Stanford Street, also ran to the pond. He called the rescue squad, police and Dr. E. A. A. Dunn, of Bethesda.

FBI Agent Says Spy Suspect Got Robin Moor Sailing Dates

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 17.—William Friedman, FBI agent, testified today that sailing dates and destination of the American steamer Robin Moor, torpedoed on May 21 in the South Atlantic, were submitted by a spy suspect for radio transmission to Germany on April 28.

The information—"S S. Robin Moor (Robin Line) due Cape Town June 2 Louren[illegible] Marques June 10, sa[illegible] May 3"—was in[illegible] of about a dozen [illegible] which Friedeman testified saw Leo Waalen, one of 15 men on trial for espionage conspiracy, deliver to William G. Sebold, American counterespionage agent.

(Eight passengers and 38 seamen were rescued after a submarine sank the Robin Moor halfway between Brazil and South Africa. Some survivors said they believed the submarine had advance information of the ship's route and had trailed her before closing in for the kill.)

After the testimony and the showing of several reels of motion picture of Sebold meeting with Waalen and other defendants, the Government rested its case with the stipulation that it might introduce several exhibits into evidence when court resumes Monday.

Presentation of the Government's case required six full weeks.

The list of sailing dates was introduced in evidence by David Kumble, counsel for Rudolph Ebeling, another defendant, during his cross-examination of Friedeman. Most of the ships on the list were in New

Connally Says U. S. Will Repay Attack

Other Senators Call Kearney Incident Result of Policies

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Every Axis warship that enters United States defensive waters shall be sunk in retaliation for the submarine attack on the destroyer Kearny, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared yesterday.

Noninterventionist legislators in Washington ascribed the attack to President Roosevelt's "shoot first" order to the Navy.

"When our naval vessels are attacked by murderous and cowardly submarines, we shall retaliate by sinking every surface raider or submarine that invades our defensive waters or threatens any of our naval vessels," Connally declared to the Associated Press at Wichita Falls, Tex. "This incident is but another revelation of the contempt of Hitler for all law—human, international and divine."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, told an America First rally at Paterson, N. J., last night that the United States cannot send its ships to destroy "the vessels of certain belligerent nations" and hope that war craft of those countries "are not going to seek to destroy" American vessels.

Nye Counsels Calmness

"It is to be expected that this incident will add somewhat to the feeling that we are being attacked by Germany," Nye said. "The force of these incidents, however, can well be dissipated by knowledge of the extent to which we have gone, under the leadership of the President, to invite these incidents."

Senator Aiken (Republican), of Vermont, took a similar view. He said: "I think we should expect it. If we send out destroyers hunting for submarines we can expect to have them shot at."

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, isolationist leader, and several other Senators decided to withhold comment until full details of the attack are available.

Senator Brewster (Republican), of Maine, and Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, the House Democratic leader, agreed that the torpedoing appeared to be linked with developments in Japan.

"The act was deliberate, there's no question about that," said McCormack. "It looks like a part of the Berlin-Tokyo strategy, what with the Japanese cabinet change yesterday."

"It would appear that Hitler is forcing the Japanese situation," said Brewster.

The incident, predicted Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire, will have the effect of speeding neutrality revision through the Senate by "an overwhelming vote." Amendment of the neutrality act to permit arming of merchant ships was approved by the House yesterday, but Senate interventionists have promised a determined fight.

Bolsters Repeal Sentiment

Bridges declared that the incident might also be expected to provide impetus to the move for outright repeal of the neutrality law, ity law.

Other comment:

House Speaker Rayburn—"This justifies statements by many of us that the United States is in danger of attack. It looks like it's a direct attack on the United Sates when there's an attack on one of its vessels."

Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts—"The United States, having taken a position in the center of submarine activities by action of President Roosevelt, according to plan, it is not surprising that this was occurred. I suppose there will be war very shortly, as planned by Roosevelt at least as far back as 1938."

Representative Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey—"If a German submarine was responsible, it proves that this man Hitler has absolutely no inhibitions about anything."

bill, said the destroyer was searching for submarines in an unneutral zone and that was "a far different thing" from convoying supplies to Iceland.

Replied McCormack, in the last major clash on the bill:

"When the time comes that an American naval vessel—assuming this one was in an unneutral zone created by the Nazi government—cannot enter any zone in the pursuit of its assignment, we might just as well say to the world 'We shall pull our naval vessels into our Navy yards, moor them at the docks, let them remain inactive and idle, and pull down the American flag.'

uestions Nazi's Right

"I do not know what authority the Nazi government has to create such a zone. One thing, however, is certain. I recognize the right of the American flag on the naval vessels of the United States to fly any place on the high seas that our country thinks it is necessary."

Analysis of the vote showed a majority of 121 for the bill, compared with an edge of only 95 for the original Lend-Lease Act on February 8 and the bare one-vote margin for extension of the draft on August 12.

Gaining Republican support for Administration policy was evident. Only 24 Republicans voted for the original lend bill, and 21 for draft extension, compared with 39 yesterday for arming ships.

Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, said the United States should serve notice on Japan that if she moves against Russia, while that nation is crippled, "we must stop them," and if she strikes in any direction, "we will destroy her navy."

Representative Plumley (Republican), of Vermont said the Kearny incident illustrates a world conspiracy "of the basest, foulest, most wicked criminals in history, saturated with a crazy determination to crush our civilization." He said America must make broader decisions than those in the armed ship bill.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia said he thought the armed ship bill clearly recognized a state of war and "with its adoption we become an army of 130,000,000 men and women, every one of us pledged to the destruction of Hitler."

U. S. to Double Arms Output Goal

appropriated for would remain undisturbed. Accompanying them, however, would be a program of equal size.

The magnitude of the "Victory Program" was hinted two weeks ago by OPM's director general, William S. Knudsen, who posed in a speech the question of whether it was better to maintain present production rates for a long period of years before vanquishing Hitler, or to "put on all steam" and do the job in a couple of years.

More explicitly, in the past week, Nelson and Stacy May, chief of the OPM's research and statistics division, made speeches asking a doubling of present schedules and the devotion of 50 per cent of the Nation's productive effort to defense, instead of the 20 or 25 per cent to be allocated for this purpose next year.

Speaking of the proposed program yesterday, one official explained that it was based on the consideration of "what does it take to beat Hitler" from the United States, the British Empire, Russia and China. For the first time, he said, the objective is being considered as a whole. Hitherto, he added, the piecemeal approach had been followed, with a small program added to sporadically and unsystematically.

Chief obstacle to the program, it was immediately apparent, is the shortage of raw materials. To overcome it, if that is possible, it is believed that far sharper curtailment of all manner of civilian production is imperative.

Prescott Dennett, secretary-treasurer of these committees, was called by the grand jury on Thursday, September 18. A few hours later he got rid of a ton of unaddressed frank envelopes, using a truck sent him by George Hill, a secretary of Representative Hamilton Fish.

Those who testified yesterday were:

Irving T. Quinn, 20, former athlete, a House postoffice aide who heard Hill order the truck sent to Dennett and later heard Hill give orders for eight mailbags it brought back to be placed in a storeroom used by Fish. Hill last week sent these bags to the grand jury, when threatened with contempt of court action.

Michael O'Gorman, 38, 1306 O Street Northwest, another House employe, who took the bags into Mr. Fish's office by mistake and was instructed there to take them to the storeroom, as Hill had ordered. After The Post disclosed these facts, Fish took the floor on a point of personal privilege and assured the House that the secretary refused to accept delivery of the mailbags from Dennett.

Landon Flays Roosevelt as Politics Player

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Kans., Oct. 17.—Alf M. Landon, quoting "nonpartisan, experienced political writers in Washington" as saying that President Roosevelt is seeking a fourth term, said tonight "We have the tragedy of a President selfishly playing politics and denouncing all disagreement with him as 'playing politics'."

In an address prepared for a meeting of Second District Women's G. O. P. Clubs, the 1936 Republican Presidential nominee added that the President had chosen a period of vital national emergency, when "all our thoughts should be centered on defense preparation," to provoke political controversy by a series of magazine articles.

Charges "Old Tactics"

"The President knows that, despite his promises to the people, we are facing a lowered standard of living. Therefore, he must resort to his old tactics of stirring hate, stirring group against group, linking the old fight for a New Deal with a new world order, in order to hold his supporters. . . .

"I have cooperated with the President before. I will do so again, when he serves the public interests. But I will not run interference for him or cooperate in any sort of hoax, even to the extent of keeping still about it."

Landon charged that under the smokescreen of national defense a little group of New Dealers is "attempting to establish a collective state in America.

"The plight of the small businessman in this country is partly because of this little but influential group of New Dealers believes his day is past. . . .

"It makes no difference to these New Dealers if men employed by small business are thrown out of work and compelled to rely on the cold comfort of public aid. This only increases the number dependent upon the state, and thus makes easier the establishment of the new world order."

The former Kansas Governor commented that Mr. Roosevelt "is good at making phrases about this country being the arsenal of democracy, but after two years we are still too much of a papier-mache arsenal."

Landon described the aluminum collection drive as an "outrageous hoax" to arouse the war spirit. He said F. H. LaGuardia, civilian defense director, had admitted processing plants did not want old aluminum.

The speech was broadcast over an N. B. C. network.

Strongly Military

The new cabinet, with Tojo himself holding three of the key portfolios and with a strong military flavor pervading other offices, was portrayed as a firm, leather-booted, heel-clicking regime, determined to enforce conclusion of the unhappy China incident, even as reports of relations with the United States were viewed with forebodings.

The day was appropriate, being the Yasukuni holiday honoring the spirits of soldiers killed in China.

A foggy mist enveloped the Emperors ceremonial visit to Yasukuni, and turned to a steady drizzle by the time the cabinet was sworn in.

The city, in expectant excitement heightened by the presence of the armed soldiers and police on guard around the Tojo residence and by the flurry of comings and goings of important personages all morning, waited for Tojo's first statement of policy some time this afternoon.

Deemed Gain for Axis

Competent observers felt that appointment of this 56-year-old cigar-chewing soldier was a victory for the Axis, which has been pressing for more active Japanese support in the European war.

Rank to Be Raised

It was understood that Tojo would be given full general's rank, more in keeping with his dual role in prospect.

Tojo was commissioned to form the new government upon the recommendation of Japanese senior statesmen to Marquis Koichi Kido, lord keeper of the privy seal. The conference leading to this decision lasted two hours and 45 minutes. Then Tojo was summoned to the palace.

The council of elders brought together nearly all the living former premiers of Japan, in addition to the lord privy seal and Dr. Yoshimichi Hara, president of the Privy Council.

Solemnly, behind his shell-rimmed glasses, the new premier said:

"I have received the imperial command to form a new cabinet and I am overwhelmed with a feeling of awe. I retired from the presence of the throne, respectfully asking a period of grace. (Time to form his cabinet.)"

Emperor Calls Admiral

While Tojo was still at the palace Admiral Koshiro Oikawa, minister of navy under Konoye, also was called there. They left the palace together.

While Tojo conferred with army men, Oikawa held an important conference with high members of the naval ministry and command, including the chief of the naval general staff, Vice Admiral Seiichi Ito.

official connections, said that Tojo had been assured the support of Gen. Gen Sugiyama, chief of staff of the imperial army, and Gen. Otozo Yamada, commander in chief of the home forces.

Sugiyama and Yamada, along with Gen. Kenji Doihara, the famous empire builder-manipulator, consulted with Tojo and the commander in chief of Japan's huge army in China, Gen. Shunroku Hata, was reliably reported to have reached Tokyo by plane for consultation.

Domei declared there would be no fundamental change in the imperial government's basic policies—"disposal of the China affair and establishment of the greater East Asia co-prosperity sphere."

Informed quarters said that the new cabinet would continue to work toward settlement of outstanding problems with the United States in order to realize Japan's aims of peace, as they said, not only in the Far East but in the world in general.

But the new premier is remembered for his assertion as long ago as 1937 that "Japan must be prepared to fight China and Russia simultaneously." His most recent active service was with the Kwantung army, Japan's big garrison in Manchukuo facing Soviet Siberia.

Gen. Tojo, 56, has served as war minister of Japan since July, 1940, taking the portfolio after a brief term as director general of military aviation. Previously he was vice minister of war.

An open admirer of German army methods, Tojo was made a military attache of the Berlin embassy in 1919, four years after he was graduated from Japan's military staff college.

On Nov. 29, 1938, the general said the attitude of the United States toward the Far East was one of "sticking to old treaties," and that it was "unwilling to recognize the changed situation in the Fart East."

He declared in 1937 that "Japan must be prepared to fight China and Russia simultaneously."

He comes of a military family. He is the son of Lieut. Gen. Eikyo Tojo.

Denies Sending Message

Sebold, who testified that he was assigned by the Germans to spy in the United States and who turned his assignment over to the FBI, said he did not send the message.

Friedeman testified that on one occasion last spring Waalen told Sebold that "Germany was holding back now but later will send many raiders into the Pacific Ocean."

At the same time, on March 10, Friedeman said, Waalen told Sebold he had made a tour of New York piers and discovered that airplanes and parts which originally had been sold to France were then being shipped to Britain.

"Waalen asked Sebold to contact the Vichy government to find out what contract No. 97 called for," Friedeman said. "Waalen said England had taken over that contract, and his examination of the docks indicated it included planes and parts."

Navy Hunts Attacker of Kearny

have torpedoed the speedy American destroyer and gotten away without a fight.

Officials quickly tied up the attack with the impending Pacific crisis. Coming while Japanese military leaders were taking the reins of government from more moderate officials, it was considered highly improbable that it was simply a coincident.

The Navy's announcement of the torpedoing of the destroyer was brief. It declared:

"The Navy Department announced that the U. S. S. Kearny, destroyer, was torpedoed this morning while on patrol duty about 350 miles south and west of Iceland.

"No casualties to personnel were indicated in dispatches received by the Navy Department.

"Despite the damage received the ship is able to proceed under her own power.

"The U. S. S. Kearny is under command of Lieut. Comdr. A. L. Danis, U. S. Navy.

"The ship is one of the Navy's newest destroyers. She was laid down in 1939 and completed in 1940. This ship has a standard displacement of 1630 tons. The ship is 341 feet long and has a 35-foot beam. She is armed with the standard five-inch battery of her class.

"No other details are available to the Navy Department at this time."

Captain D. C. Resident

Commander Danis, captain of the Kearny, is a resident of Washington. A former airship officer, he is a survivor of the Macon disaster, and served aboard the Navy's other ill-fated large dirigible, the Akron. He had charge of the fitting out of the Kearney and took command of the vessel when it was commissioned last year.

The ship, named for Commodore Lawrence Kearny, naval hero of a century ago, was built at the Federal Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. yard at Kearny, N. J. It cost about five million dollars.

Naval officers, while awaiting further details before commenting on the attack, expressed satisfaction that the vessel was able to withstand a torpedo attack. Destroyers are built for speed and hitting power and carry little or no armor to withstand the explosive force of the half-ton of TNT carried in a torpedo.

A Sturdy Ship

The Kearney, however, is one of the sturdiest destroyers afloat and ships of its class have been likened to "young cruisers" by Navy chiefs. It has a double hull under water, the outer skin of which is designed to explode a torpedo and lessen the force of the blow to the inner skin.

Besides its main battery of five 5-inch combination antiaircraft and horizontal firing guns, the ship carries ten smaller guns, ten torpedo tubes and depth charges for use against submarines.

Yesterday's attack was the third attempt that has been made to sink an American warship during the war. On September 3 a submarine fired two torpedoes at the U. S. destroyer Greer in the same general area as that of the attack on the Kearny. The Greer was not hit and struck back with depth charges.

Nazi Heckler Blames British for Attack

London, Oct 17 (DNB).—The charge that a British submarine was responsible for the attack on the U. S. S. Kearny was the contribution tonight of Germany's "ghost voice" of the air.

Interrupting a British newscast of the Kearny incident, the radio heckler ended with:

"God save our gracious King—from the Jews. Amen."

Army Announces Contracts for 57 USO Buildings

Within 19 days, contracts totaling $3,307,226 for the erection of 31 USO recreational buildings in various sections of the country have been awarded by the construction division, Office of the Quartermaster General, U. S. A., the War Department announced yesterday.

Work on some of these contracts has been started and work on the others will begin within the next few days. All are scheduled for completion by December 15. The Presidential order transferring construction of the USO buildings from the Federal Works Administration to the construction division, Quartermaster Corps, was received on September 27. Since that date, the construction division has not only awarded the contracts mentioned, but has prepared and sent to the field detailed construction plans and specifications for six types of buildings.

The War Department announced also that expansion of the permanent type United States Army recreational camps to provide weekend accommodations for an additional 5300 service men, gives the Army capacity to care for 26,300 men at 39 permanent areas.

Panama to Offer U.S. Land for Bases, New Envoy Says

Mexico City, Oct. 17 (AP).—Ernesto Jean Guardia, new Panamanian Ambassador to Washington, today said concession of land near the Canal Zone for American air bases would be one of the first orders of business when he reaches Washington.

Guardia, here on the way to his post, said the new Panamanian regime was in agreement on the matter and was completely in accord with the Inter-American idea of a common hemisphere defense.

The land concession, he asserted, was agreed upon by the ousted administration of Dr. Arnulfo Arias. Guardia maintained the sole reason for the change in the government was Dr. Arias' departure from the country without authorization of the national assembly, as required by the constitution.

to allay any uneasiness resulting from its action by stating:

"For some time, the movements of American merchant ships have been controlled and directed as seemed desirable. Instructions regarding this are amplified or modified from time to time. There is nothing unusual or new in such procedure."

However, marine circles in San Francisco were reported by the Associated Press to have heard that all American ships bound for the Orient had been directed to put in at Honolulu.

Affected by such an order, it was said here, might be 14 vessels now carrying war materials to Vladivostok for the Soviets.

American steamship lines operating in the Pacific include the American President, American Mail, American Pioneer, Matson, Isthmian and Waterman.

A report from Manila said 50 American ships in the Western Pacific had been ordered to put into friendly ports. The motorship Perida, under the flag of Panama, put back into Manila a few hours after sailing.

There was some indication that such a move had been discussed at President Roosevelt's Thursday afternoon conference with his "war council."

Much significance was attached, at the same time, to the timing of the Navy Department's release of its report on the Pacific bases, created in anticipation of such developments as those now taking place.

The department announced that "development of bases designed to service various types of the Navy's floating arm and its air elements is in many places far ahead of progress originally hoped for."

Highlights of the report were:

Development of an air base on Midway Island "was completed far ahead of schedule" and "substantial expansions are now under way."

"Exceptional speed was made in the development of Alaskan air bases at Sitka, Kodiak, and Dutch Harbor."

The original program at Kodiak "is substantially completed" and additional enlarging construction is "proceeding satisfactorily." The new work, however, "has been planned so as not to interfere with the use of sections of the base already completed." Development of the air base at Sitka is "even further along than that at Kodiak."

"Another project on which outstanding progress has been made is the great drydock at Pearl Harbor. The dock is 'in the dry' and basically complete. The great dock will take any of the Navy's battleships or aircraft carriers."

The Kaneohe air base on the island of Oahu "is in operation and enlargements are now being carried forward," and "satisfactory progress" is being made at Palmyra and Johnston islands.

Ecuador Curbs Japanese Trade

Quito, Ecuador, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Ecuadorean government clamped restrictions on trade with Japan today as a result of complications arising from the freezing of Japanese assets in the United States.

Under the new rules, all products for export to Japan must be purchased with sucres, Ecuador's national currency, and all imports as well as exports will be strictly supervised by the finance ministry.

The regulations are expected to even up trade between the two countries, formerly heavily in Japan's favor.

Reds Fiercely Beat Off Nazi Onslaught

By the Associated Press

Moscow, (Saturday), Oct. 18.—Red armies before Moscow beat off one fierce attack after another by German forces battering at the western defenses of the capital, the Russians announced officially early today.

'Heavy fighting continued along the whole front,' said the early morning communique, which also announced abandonment of the Black Sea port of Odessa. "Fighting was especially stubborn in the western direction where the Red army beat off fierce enemy attacks."

Earlier front line dispatches said the Soviet defenders had smashed two German spearheads which had penetrated defenses approximately 100 miles from the city, but that the situation of the capital remained grave.

The communique failed to specify where the assaults on the central front were stopped, but dispatches to the official press said the Germans were beaten back on the Vyazma front near Kalinin.

An Orderly Evacuation

"The evacuation of Soviet troops from Odessa, organized by the Red army command during the past eight days, was completed in time and in perfect order," the communique said of the retreat from the southern city which the Germans announced they entered Thursday.

"Our troops having fulfilled their task in the Odessa area were transferred by our fleet to other sectors of the front without any losses.

"Rumors disseminated by the German radio to the effect that Soviet troops were forced to evacuate Odessa by an onslaught of German and Rumanian forces are absolutely without foundation.

"In reality the evacuation of Odessa was carried out pursuant to the decision of the supreme command of the Red army for strategic reasons and without any pressure on the part of German and Rumanian troops.

Nazi Claims "Bragging"

"Consequently statements of the German command concerning trophies allegedly captured by German and Rumanian troops in the Odessa area are nothing but empty bragging."

During aerial thrusts against Moscow, 14 German planes were brought down in the vicinity of the city, the Russians announced.

In the Vyazma sector a heavy Red artillery fire halted the German advance, while in the Kalinin area more than 100 German tanks supported by aircraft were destroyed after the Nazis had penetrated the Russian lines Wednesday and Thursday with parachute troops, tanks and motorized infantry, the Russian reports stated.

The Russian noon communique yesterday acknowledged no new gains for the Germans, but made it clear terrific fighting continued with apparently huge losses to both sides in both men and material.

Orel Drive Slackens

(The Moscow radio was heard in London to announce that the German attack in the direction of Orel, 200 miles south of the capital, had slackened.

(The general opinion in London, however, was that the German pincers were closing in on Moscow. A Russian radio broadcast heard in London and relayed by the British radio told how the workers were preparing "to repel the invader," and it was learned that some messages from Moscow asked authoritative persons in London to direct communications to an address "other than Moscow."

(Although there was as yet no formal confirmation that the Russian government had withdrawn, it was learned that the Soviet authorities had requested the British military mission in Moscow to leave, and that it had done so. Other advices indicated the Soviet government and all foreign diplomats were leaving for Kazan, Tartar capital half way to the Urals, which is expected to become the Soviet Union's provisional capital.

Moscow Workers Prepared

(The Moscow radio broadcast was reported as follows: "Endless streams of lorries, military supplies and motorized infantry are streaming out of the city toward the front. Along one street come powerful tanks, along another armor-piercing guns and motorcycle despatch riders.

("Moscow now breathes the spirit of the front. Thousands of workers can be seen receiving military training while others are busy building defenses. The workers of Moscow are preparing to come face to face with the enemy.")

"Counter-Attack" on Poland

(September, 1939)

BERLIN, September 1, 1939—It's a "counterattack!" At dawn this morning Hitler moved against Poland. It's a flagrant act of aggression. But Hitler and the high command call it a "counterattack."

The people in the street were apathetic when I drove to the Rundfunk for my first broadcast at 8:15 a. m. Along the east-west axis the Luftwaffe were mounting five big antiaircraft guns to protect Hitler when he addressed the Reichstag at 10 a. m.

SHIRER

I had to remain at the radio to handle Hitler's speech for America. Throughout the speech, I thought as I listened, ran a curious strain, as though Hitler himself were dazed at the fix he had got himself into and felt a little desperate about it.

Tomorrow Britain and France probably will come in and you have your second World War.

(Later, 2:30 a. m.)—Almost through our first blackout. We had our first air-raid alarm at 7 p. m. No planes came over. But with the English and French in, it may be different tomorrow.

The isolation from the outside world that you feel on a night like this is increased by a new decree issued tonight prohibiting the listening to foreign broadcasts. Who's afraid of the truth? And no wonder. Curious that not a single Polish bomber got through tonight.

BERLIN, September 2—Hitler's "counterattack" on Poland has on this Sabbath day become a world war. The time: 11 a. m.

I was standing in the Wilhelmplatz about noon when the loudspeakers suddenly announced that England had declared herself at war with Germany. Some 250 people were standing there in the sun. There was not a murmur. They just stood there as they were before. Stunned.

The people cannot realize yet that Hitler has led them into a world war. Last night I heard Germans talking of the "Polish thing" lasting but a few weeks, or months at the most. Few believed that Britain and France would move. Ribbentrop was sure they wouldn't and had told the Fuehrer, who believed him.

BERLIN, September 4—After midnight and no air-raid, even with the British and French in the war.

On the feedback from New York tonight I heard the story of the sinking of the Athenia with 1400 passengers, including 240 Americans, aboard. The English said it was a German U-boat. The Germans promptly denied it.

BERLIN, September 5—Very strange about that Western Front. The Wilhelmstrasse assured us today that not a single shot has been fired there yet.

BERLIN, September 6—In one week in Poland the Germans have pushed far beyond their 1914 frontiers. It begins to look like a rout for the Poles.

BERLIN, September 8—The German high command announces that at 5:15 p. m. today German troops reached Warsaw. Even our military attaches were stunned by the news.

BERLIN, September 9—No more news of the German army's entry into Warsaw and I begin to suspect yesterday's announcement was premature.

Goering broadcast today. He said 70 German divisions now in Poland would be released within a week for service "elsewhere." Apparently the war in Poland is all but over. Britain and France have done nothing on the Western Front to relieve the tremendous pressure on Poland. It begins to look as though in Hitler we have a new Napoleon who may sweep Europe and conquer it.

BERLIN, September 10—One week after the Anglo-French declaration of a state of war the average German is beginning to wonder if it's a world war after all. If it is war, why only a few leaflets over the Rhineland? The industrial heart of Germany lies along the Rhine close to France. From there come most of the munitions that are blowing up Poland with such deadly effect. Yet not a bomb has fallen on a Rhineland factory.

BERLIN, September 11—For the first time today the war communique mentions French artillery fire on the Western Front.

BERLIN, September 16—Every German I've met today liked Col. Lindbergh's broadcast. The story gets a good play in the Berlin newspapers, which is more than Roosevelt's speeches get. The headlines are friendly.

BERLIN, September 17—At 6 o'clock this morning, Moscow time, the Red army began an invasion of Poland. Russia of course had a non-aggression pact with Poland.

Off to the "front" tomorrow, if we can find one.

ZOPPOT, near DANZIG, September 18—Drove all day long from Berlin through Pomerania and the Corridor to here. In the woods in the Corridor the sickening sweet smell of dead horses and the sweeter smell of dead men. Here, the Germans say, a whole division of Polish cavalry charged against hundreds of German tanks and was annihilated.

DANZIG, September 19-0, 2:30 a. m.—Today I have had a glimpse of an actual battle. It was going on two miles north of Gdynia on a ridge that stretched for seven miles inland from the sea. There was something about it that was very tragic and at the same time grotesque.

We stood on a hill in the midst of the city of Gdynia. It was a German observation post. Officers stood about, peering through field-glasses.

The Germans had the Poles surrounded on three sides, and the sea, from which German destroyers were peppering them, cut them off on the fourth. The Germans were using everything in the way of weapons, big guns, small guns, tanks, and airplanes. The Poles had nothing but machine guns, rifles, and two anti-aircraft pieces which they were trying desperately to use as artillery against German machine-gun posts and German tanks.

The Poles had turned two large buildings, one an officers' school, the other the Gdynia radio station, into fortresses and were firing machine guns from several of the windows. After a half-hour a German shell struck the roof of the school and set it on fire. Then German infantry, supported by tanks, charged up the hill and surrounded the building. But they did not take it. The Poles kept machine-gunning them from the basement windows of the burning building. Finally a squadron of Nazi bombers appeared.

It was a hopeless position for the Poles. And yet they fought on. The German officers with us kept praising their courage.

We watched the battle until noon. As we left I asked an officers about the Polish artillery.

"They haven't any," he said. "If they had just one '75,' they could have blown us all to bits. It's only 2 miles over there, and this would have been a natural target."

We drove to the Westerplatte, a small island between Danzig and the sea which had been used by the Poles as a supply depot. For five days a small Polish garrison had held out on the island against the 11-inch guns of the Schleswig-Holstein firing at point-blank range and Stukas dropping 500-pound bombs. Today the Westerplatte looked like the wasteland around Verdun.

Interesting: the bombs tossed by the Stukas were more deadly and more acurate than the shells from the old battleship. A round Polish bunker not over 40 feet in diameter had received two direct hits from 500-pound bombs. The 10-foot thickness of concrete and steel had been torn to pieces like tissue paper.

In the afternoon we drove to the Danzig Guild Hall to hear Hitler make his first speech since his Reichstag address of September 1 started off the war. I had a seat on the aisle, and as he strode past me to the rostrum I thought he looked more imperious than I had ever seen him. Also he was about as angry during his speech as I've ever seen him.

Afterwards a Nazi acquaintance confided to me that the "old man" was in a terrible rage because he had counted on making today's speech in Warsaw, that he had waited three or four days outside the Polish capital, burning to enter it like a conquering Caesar and make his speech of victory, and that when the Poles inside refused to surrender, his patience had cracked and he rushed to Danzig to make his speech. He had to talk!

BERLIN, September 20—Tonight the press talks openly of peace. All the Germans I've talked to today are dead sure we shall have peace within a month. They are in high spirits.

BERLIN, September 21—In an order of the day to his troops last night Gen. von Brauchitsch, the commander-in-chief of the army, announced that the operations against Poland were concluded. Thus ends the "counterattack." In 18 days this amazing fighting machine which is the German army has overrun Poland, annihilated its armies, chased its government from Polish soil. But Warsaw still holds out gallantly.

Tomorrow—PEACE OFFENSIVE.

Nazis Claim Plants Outside Moscow

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 17.—The German armies battling toward Moscow were declared tonight to have occupied factories, power plants and lignite fields in the city's outlying economic region and thus to have brought appreciably closer the last great struggle for the Soviet capital.

Just where these industrial centers lay was not precisely stated. It was said, however, that their capture represented advances west and south of Moscow.

A German commentator declared that assuming the wind was right the city was now hearing the thunder of Nazi guns. And in any case, he added, "German air bombs must be painfully audible."

Material Loss Estimated

[The United Press said the Germans estimated Russian material losses since the start of the war at 16,183 armored units and 24,308 guns.

[The Russian material losses were in addition to last week's estimate which placed Soviet losses in manpower in excess of six million troops.]

Not only the central front, but the far southern theater, in the region extending from Kharkov to Rostov, were described as areas of swift German advances.

The Ukrainian German and Allied armies, freed by the fall of Odessa from fear of counteraction at their southern flank, were said to be smashing eastward in the Donets Valley against a desperate Russian resistance typified by counter-attacks which hurled old-fashioned cavalrymen at German tanks.

Russians "Decimated"

In a single such clash—between what the Nazis called the arms of the present and last centuries—it was claimed that the Russian units were decimated and 800 prisoners, 500 horses and 51 cannons were captured.

The capture of Odessa, which was credited largely to Rumanian arms, brought a shower of praise for Rumania along with suggestions that the country could expect commensurate recognition in the Axis, proposed new order.

The booty seized in that long-fesieged city, said the high command, "Cannot yet be estimated." A German war reported disclosed, however, that the Russians had set fire to all oil tanks in the city before falling back. His report did not indicate how much of Odessa, aside from military objectives, had been destroyed.

Russian efforts to flee the flaming city by sea, the high command declared, had cost them at least six transports sunk by bombers and eight more badly damaged, along with a red speedboat destroyed.

R.A.F. Raids Reich Sixth Night

Copyright by New York Times

London, Oct. 17.—Bombing raids on Duisburg and other places in western Germany last night, aerial attacks on enemy shipping off the Norwegian coast and in the neighborhood of the Frisian Islands, sorties over docks at Dunkerque, Ostend, and Calais, and fighter "sweeps" along the coasts of France and Belgium, were announced by the air ministry today.

These raids cost the British two bomber planes and two coastal command machines.

It was the sixth night in succession that the Royal Air Force has attacked Germany, and the third night this week that British bombers have been over an important industrial area in western Germany. Air officials did not give any details about the results of last night's raids.

A strong force of cannon-firing Hurricanes made a lightning visit to the coasts of northern France and Belgium late today. They set two armed trawlers afire and shot up various gun positions. The trawlers were scurrying into a harbor when the Hurricane pilots tore along the coast at a low level. The British fliers successfully escaped the German antiaircraft fire and returned to their base.

No German fliers visited Britain during daylight today but after dark one or two Nazi raiders were reported over the east coast of England. They did not tarry long and there were no reports of bombs dropped anywhere.

Last night there were small-scale raids on eastern England but no damage was done.

Brisbane, Australia, Oct. 17 (U.P.)—Snakes were added to the northern command army forces today for specialized work.

Panama Ousts Envoy

Panama, Panama, Oct. 17 (AP).—The government announced today the dismissal of Dr. Francisco Villalaz as Panamanian Minister to Germany, the Netherlands and Poland. Villalaz was a long-time friend of ousted President Arnulfo Arias and was reportedly a Nazi sympathizer.

Acute Food Shortage

Aleppo, Syria, Oct. 17 (AP).—The people of the Italian island of Rhodes are suffering from hunger as a result of the British naval and air blockade in the eastern Mediterranean, a traveler who just arrived in Syria from the Dodecanese Islands declared today.

Many, he said, were so short of food "they would sell their souls for a tin of bully beef."

Greek residents of the island who lost Italian citizenship at the start of the war were said to be suffering most. Their food is rationed strictly while the Italian residents purchase freely from the meager stocks available, the traveler said.

New Death Penalty

The Hague, Netherlands, Oct. 17 (AP).—A decree by Reichs Comissioner Arthur Seysz-Inquart today fixed a maximum penalty of death for endangering or limiting the Holland food supply.

The penalty would apply to aggravated cases of violation of food price regulations, trading in the illegal "black market," or slaughtering animals except in quantities and at times designated by the authorities.

The commissioner warned parents that the death penalty could be inflicted on children as young as 16 years old for violation of the decree.

British Officer Shot

Bologna, Italy, Oct. 17 (AP).—The newspaper Il Resto del Carlino reported today that a British lieutenant colonel was shot and killed while trying to escape arrest in Athens.

The officer, who had remained hidden in an Athens house after British troops fled Greece, was discovered by Italian authorities, the dispatch said.

Two soldiers who were sent to arrest him were greeted with pistol shots and wounded. The officer then ran through the main streets of Athens firing on Italians he met until shot by an Italian officer in a midtown square. Three soldiers and three civilians were wounded.

Son of Plane Designer Lost In Air Combat

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Oct. 17.—David Usher Barnwell, 19, a son of the late Capt. F. S. Barnwell, designer of the famous Blenheim and Beaufort bomber planes, has been posted as missing and believed killed, the air ministry announced today. The youth, a member of the Royal Air Force and possessor of the distinguished flying cross, was stationed at Malta. He received the D. F. C. for bringing down the Italian 3-engined bombers over Malta in one night.

His two brothers lost their lives while serving in the R. A. F. in this war. His father was killed in 1938 while testing a plane. Of the family only the mother remains.

Last Tuesday, according to the air ministry announcement, Barnwell took off from the Malta base a few minutes after enemy planes had atacked that island fortress. He was said to have been flying a light fighter as he sped in pursuit of the attackers.

By radio telephone, he communicated with his bas eand reported the shooting down of an enemy plane. A few minutes later, the ministry said, he announced that he was bailing out over the sea. Royal Air Force planes tried unsuccessfully to find a trace of him.

Nazi Military Experts Praise Strategy of Soviet 'Pupils'

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Oct. 17.—German military commentators today took issue with their British and American opposites asserting that the Soviet supreme command had good reasons for not admiring the strategical recipe of their Allies, who are now blaming them for not having followed the traditional Russian strategy of withdrawing into "the vast Russian spaces."

Tomorrow's issue of the influential German weekly Das Reich is following this digest of the strategical lessons of the Russian campaign by prophesying that, as in 1915, the Dardanelles are the principal objective in Prime Minister Winston Churchill's plans for the conduct of this war.

Citing Capt. Lidell-Hart and other British and American military experts, the Frankfurter Zeitung today questions their belated suggestion that the three Soviet marshals should "save their armies," even if this involves "the sacrifice of more territory and of important cities." The main reason which, in this opinion, had prompted the command to throw from the very beginning of the war the bulk of its troops and material against the invading German armies instead of following the strategical pattern of the generals of 1812, was that the Russians had to defend at any cost their war industries in the western and central zones of the Soviet Union.

View Not Unanimous

This partial "justification" of Soviet strategy seems, however, to be at variance with the view expressed last week by a spokesman of the German high command in Berlin, who said that Premier Josef Stalin's military advisers had greatly "obliged" the Germans by throwing the mass of their troops on the front instead of utilizing the depths of the territory by means of an "elastic retreat."

The commentator of the Frankfurter Zeitung now pays a "compliment" to the Soviet leadership by stating that in June, 1941, for the first time in this war "the German general staff had encountered its pupil." After the Polish campaign and especially after the Battle of Flanders the Soviet military command had tried "with wild and ruthless energy" to imitate the Third Reich's "revolutionary" strategical principles.

In spite of elaborate defense lines and fortifications which the Germans had to break in the course of their advance, the Soviet supreme command was never—according to the Frankfurter Zeitung's military expert—inhibited by any kind of "Maginot complex." The cases were rare, he says, in which Soviet troops adopted merely defensive tactics. On the contrary, they have been continuously counterattacking and throwing wedges between German tanks and infantry. Moreover, they are said to have repeatedly started offensives on other sectors in order to relieve the pressure on the most threatened part of their front.

Qualified Praise

The German expert takes care, however, to qualify this compliment by stating that although the Soviet had "conquered the master's recipe for victory," they were unable to "imitate the creative spirit of the revolutionary strategy."

This string of strategical discussions in which the German press is now engaged was rounded up today by an ironical analysis of the British "sit-down strategy" in Das Reich. The analysis culminates in the prophecy that Churchill intends to apply his favorite conception of "amphibious strategy" by forcing a passage through the Dardanelles and hence threatening the German left flank in the Black Sea.

Churchill's basic strategical conception is now exactly the same as it was in the last war, the writer of this article asserts. After citing Churchill as saying that when the enemies' front on land cannot be pierced it is necessary to apply "encirclement movements of an amphibious nature" he suggests that now, as in 1914-1918, all strategical plans of Churchill are focused on finding vulnerable spots in the enemy's extreme flanks where Britain could apply this combined sea and land power.

But One Point Open

After the Norwegian "experiment" failed in 1940, no such points existed on the northern German flank, since Petsamo, Murmansk and Archangel are all too far distant for harassing seriously the German front. On the other hand Iraq, Syria and Iran merely indicates, says Das Reich, in what direction Churchill's strategical imagination is now working.

However, the inadequate transportation facilities of Iran appear to be such a serious handicap for British help to Russia that it appears more like a greeting from a distance than a firm handshake."

These considerations, in this German view, are supposed to lead Churchill to the necessity of forcing the Dardanelles, which would permit the utilization of the armies of Gen. Archibald P. Wavell and Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck. Churchill, say the German commentators, would, of course, have to fight his way through the Dardanelles "since Turkey would never voluntarily allow him a free passage."

Das Reich concludes its far-fetched forecast with the statement that Germany has no reason to feel alarmed with the plans of a "military amateur" in view of the "military genius of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, which has already been so strikingly manifest in this war.

U.S. Embassy Staff, 10 Newswriters Fleeing Moscow

The State Department said yesterday that United States Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt, other members of the Moscow diplomatic corps, high officials of the Soviet foreign office and members of the American Supply Mission have left Moscow for a destination to the East.

With Steinhardt are all the members of the Moscow embassy staff, except two secretaries and three clerks, who are staying in the beleaguered capital for the time being.

Also aboard the train are military and naval attaches of the United States, two representatives of the American Red Cross and ten American correspondents.

The correspondents were believed here to include Henry Cassidy and Robert Nagidoff, of the Associated Press; C. L. Sulzberger, of the New York Times; Wallace Carroll, Henry Shapiro and M. S. Handler, of the United Press; Alice Leone Moats and Quentin Reynolds, of Colliers' Magazine; A. T. Steele, of the Chicago Daily News, and Dennis McElvoy, of Columbia Broadcasting System.

Embassy workers remaining in Moscow were named as Second Secretary Llewellyn Thompson, of Las Animas, Colo.; Third Secretary G. Frederick Reinhardt, Mills College, Calif., and Clerks Harold N. Waddell, Brookhaven, Ga.; John Francis Morgan, Providence, R. I., and John Leino, native of Finland and former resident of California.

U. S. to Draft Huge Idle Stock Stores

Enormous stores of "hidden, lost and frozen" inventories will be subject to requisition by the Government for national defense purposes under authority of a law the White House announced yesterday had been signed by President Roosevelt.

In anticipation of the authority, which permits requisitioning of any supplies, equipment and machinery needed for defense, the OPM has conducted an extensive survey of idle stocks in warehouses, factories and railroad yards, it was learned yesterday.

It was also disclosed that an order is being drafted to freeze the movement of all excessive or hoarded supplies so that they cannot be moved off or hidden.

Fleming Boomed for Post

Prominently mentioned for the job of heading inventory control and requisitioning in the OPM is Gen. Philip B. Fleming, head of the Wage-Hour Administration.

The OPM survey was made in the form of questionnaires sent to about 5000 warehouses, 1400 banks and 600 railroads, asking information on the existence of idle and frozen supplies.

Some of the queries have now been returned, officials said, and show enormous quantities of items needed for defense, scattered throughout the country in large and small amounts.

Carloads of Machinery Found

In less than a score of the largest individual stockpiles, they said, there were discovered carloads of machinery the shipment of which to a foreign country was stopped by German conquest, and thousands of tons of silk, rubber, latex, wool, shellac, burlap, hemp and sisal, some of which had been held immobile since last February.

In addition, these few instances showed several carload lots of iron and steel, thousands of tons of iron ore, and millions of pounds of copper and copper products, some of the latter stored since 1938. Many thousands of tons of tin plate, bronze, glass, and manganese ore were discovered in storage for a year or more.

Authority Use a Problem

It was not certain yesterday how the authority of the property requisition law would be delegated. Alternatives are to grant the powers to the OPM, to be exercised in behalf of other military and civilian defense agencies, or to delegate parts of the authority separately to various governmental branches.

Officials said that armed with the new authority, they anticipated no major difficulty in "unfreezing" and recovering stocks held by speculators and dealers, or those ordered by foreign agencies to which shipments were now impossible.

The mere existence of the authority would be sufficient, they believed, to obviate the necessity of actual requisitioning in most cases.

The Government is expected to use field agents of several departments to make a continuing survey of inventories and stores, and may even cooperate with private agencies to uncover hidden supplies. The employment of industrial safety inspectors, meter readers, engineers, building inspectors and banking agencies is said to be possible.

Burton Envisions 'Traffic Capital'

nicipal safety efforts be continuing, scientific and headed by capable, authoritative leadership.

As he spoke at the AAA meeting, Commissioner Guy Mason at the District Building was advocating a drastic boost in parking violation fines to enforce the proposed new bans on standing, stopping and parking during rush hours.

Mason, with the concurrence of Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz, suggested parking fines and collateral be "trebled or even quadrupled." The average parking fine is now $2. Mason would hike this to $6 or $8.

They Save Money, He Says

Mason charged that many motorists were using the public streets as "storage places" and through infrequent fine payments are "getting off cheaper than by using garages or parking lots."

"Perhaps," he said, "we could break this up if car owners knew they would be forced to pay heavily when they receive parking tickets."

In his talk to the AAA Advisory Board, Senator Burton reviewed briefly his experiences in Cleveland and said that both engineering and enforcement problems should be attacked from a "strictly scientific angle."

Police officers handling traffic, said Senator Burton, should be trained specially, as should the highway engineering staff.

"Traffic control," he declared, "is not a job for amateurs."

As at least a partial solution of Washington's congestion problem, Senator Burton advocated additional parking meters. The city of Cleveland, he said, now has 4000 meters covering the entire downtown area.

Gas Shortage Eased

Senator Burton also touched on the gasoline shortage, explaining that the emergency had been greatly lessened through the efforts of Petroleum Coordinator Ickes.

The Senator, who is chairman of the Traffic Subcommittee of the Senate District Committee, was introduced by Board Chairman John L. Vandegrift.

Vandegrift also prefaced his remarks with the statement that Washington's traffic problem is "not as bad as it is made out to be."

"There is a lot of hysterics here," he declared, "but there are cities all over the country in worse shape than we are."

The meeting was attended by representatives of municipal, school and civic agencies.

Vichy, Berlin Talk Of Reestablishing Diplomatic Link

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Oct. 17 (AP).—Negotiations between French and German representatives are being held again with the possibility, authorized sources said tonight, that they may lead to a resumption of formal diplomatic and consular relations between France and Germany.

Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan returned here from Paris today and conferred immediately with Marshal Petain, presumably to report on negotiations he has had with German authorities.

Gen. Maxime Weygand, Vichy's military commander in North Africa, who arrived by plane yesterday, came to hear Darlan report on his collaborationist conversations, informed sources asserted.

Joe Mudd, 5, Gets Cotton Sandwich For His Breakfast

Philadelphia, Oct. 17. (AP)—A cotton sandwich was ordered for breakfast today for 5-year-old Joseph Mudd and physicians couldn't say when his diet would be changed.

The child was brought to Hahnemann Hospital after he swallowed a 2½-inch-long corsage pin. The sandwiches, made with two slices of bread, buttered and spread with jelly, have absorbent cotton for a filler.

Doctors said they hoped it would form a protective mass about the pin and keep it from piercing the intestines.

Unionist, Hurt In Steel Strike, Wins $30,000 Suit

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Oct. 17.—A jury late today returned a $30,000 personal injury damages verdict against Republic Steel Corporation for a C. I. O. unionist who contended company police inspired and led a 1937 steel strike raid on union headquarters.

The plaintiff, John Solanics, of Cleveland, had asked $50,000 on contention he suffered a permanent brain injury.

The suit was the first to be tried of more than 280 actions seeking $2,500,000 damages from Republic because of strike violence.

Republic attorneys contended the strike riot here in which Solanics was injured July 26, 1937, was a spontaneous rebellion of nonstriking employes.

Nine jurors signed "yes" to this written question submitted by Republic attorneys: "Did Republic Steel enter into a conspiracy to prevent unionization or bring the strike to an end by means of violence?"

Three women did not sign the verdict. Court attaches explained agreement of only 9 of the 12 jurors is necessary in a civil case.

F. M. Radio Used To Ease Childbirth

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 17.—Frequency modulation radio music was used at Henroten Hospital today in an unusual experiment to ease the pains of childbirth.

Mrs. Pauline Siegel, 29, listened to a program of light classical and popular music for more than an hour as Dr. Edward L. Cornell delivered a son by Caesarian section under local anesthesia.

Dr. Cornell said that the experiment was a success and should be given further trials.

Specially designed ear plugs were used to keep the music from distracting the operating staff.

Mrs. Siegel, who is 4 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 100 pounds, hummed and sang at times during the operation and commented: "It's swell."

Part of Greer Story Hidden, Nye Charges

By the Associated Press

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 17.—Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, charged tonight that the President did not "tell the whole story" when he announced that the destroyer Greer had encountered a submarine off Iceland more than a month ago.

In an address prepared for an America First rally, Nye said the torpedo attack on the destroyer Kearny, announced by the Navy today, could be expected to "add somewhat to the feeling that we are being attacked by Germany."

"The force of these incidents, however, can well be dissipated by knowledge of the extent to which we have gone, under the leadership of the President, to invite these incidents," he declared.

British Plane Involved

"It now can be told that the President did not tell us the whole story when he revealed the encounter of the Greer with German submarines. He did not tell then what we know now, namely, that the Greer went to the hidden German submarine upon being notified of its whereabouts by a British bomber plane.

"It is known now that this British plane dropped bombs in the neighborhood of the hidden submarine, and it is not unfair to assume that the submarine believed these bombs to have come from the destroyer Greer that was pursuing it.

"It is known now that for more than three hours the Greer pursued this submarine and that the submarine fired upon the Greer only after the explosions resulting from the bombs dropped by the British airplane.

Of Our Own Making

"These incidents involving the Greer and the Kearny are incidents very largely of our own making and our own inviting. We cannot order our ships to shoot to destroy the vessels of certain belligerent nations and hope at the same time that the ships of those nations are not going to seek to destroy our ships.

"I hope the American people are going to deal realistically with these incidents and realize that at least one of them has been provoked. It still is America's duty to stay out of this war. But it will grow increasingly difficult to stay out if we proceed to a course that is bound to invite incidents."

Girl Canoeist's Death Blamed To Candy, Chill

A ten-cent bag of candy apparently helped cause the death of a 19-year-old Washington girl who drowned in the Tidal Basin late yesterday afternoon after she fell into the water from a rented canoe.

The victim, Marie Ferrari, of 4130 Legation Street, rented the craft at the boathouse and had only gone about 75 yards when attendants heard her screaming and saw her struggling in the water. Though said to be an expert swimmer, she went down before a boat could reach her.

C. M. Capper, manager of the boathouse, said that the girl had given him a bag of sugar candy when she went out, saying that she had been eating it all afternoon at the movies and felt "a little sick" as a result.

Police believed that this fact, coupled with the shock of the cold October water, might have given her cramps and caused her inability to stay afloat.

The canoe was not upset, and it was not certain how she fell out of the boat. However, Capper reported that an unidentified man standing on the sea-wall told him that she was trying to climb from the canoe onto a moored swanboat when she went into the water. Capper estimated the depth of the water at the point as between 10 and 12 feet.

Her body was recovered by harbor policemen M. G. Randall and L. Baliles after half an hour of dredging with the aid of the No. One Rescue Squad. She was pronounced dead at 6:20 p.m. by an Emergency Hospital doctor after efforts to revive her proved futile.

Marie was the daughter of Joseph L. and Christine Ferrari, and was the youngest girl in a family of five daughters and two sons. She was graduated from Wilson High School in 1938 and had formerly attended the Wood Secretarial School. Her family said that she had an "intense love" for Washington and was in the habit of going out on the Basin around sunset, or up in the Monument, just to look at the parks and buildings of the city.

neighbors. The boy was an only child. The grief-stricken parents sat in their home, surrounded by relatives and neighbors yesterday while county police, under direction of Sergeant Nolte, boarded over the pond.

The Greenways, who moved into the house about two months ago and have a child near the age of Harvey, are on a trip to Missouri, neighbors said.

The pool is 9x7 feet and about 30 inches deep. Its black waters bear a profuse growth of waterlilies and are stocked with gold fish.

A near-tragedy occurred at the same scene several years ago when John Scott, also a 3-year-old, fell into the water, neighbors said, but he managed to scramble out.

Police said the Greenways will be asked to screen the pool with wire or grating to keep other children out. Turner is looking out for the house and feeding the goldfish while the owners are absent.

Navy Lets Contracts for 14 Plastic-Built Test Gliders

By Frederick R. Barkley
Copyright by New York Times

Contracts have recently been awarded by the Navy Department for 14 experimental gliders, including four large troop-carrying ships built entirely of a newly developed wood-impregnated plastic, the Department announced today.

Two of the latter will be 24-place ships, to be built by Snead & Co. of Orange, Va., and the other two will be 12-place craft to be built by the Allied Aviation Corporation of Baltimore. The other ten small two-place training gliders will be built by the Schweizer Aviation Corporation of Elmira, N. Y.

Experimental Program

It is emphasized that the glider program is largely experimental in order to determine the place of this type of aircraft in the Navy's defense plans. Although there are several recent notable examples in foreign countries of the use of transport gliders, it is pointed out that their operation in this Nation's military organization is subject to entirely different problems. Such factors as distance from objective, necessity of speed, field of operation, air superiority, etc., must be thoroughly considered and evaluated. In this connection, the use of parachutes as an alternate method of landing troops must also be taken into consideration.

The plastic to be used in the transport gliders has undergone extensive tests and is particularly suited to this type of construction, the Navy said. Among its many advantages are that it will not pick up moisture or fungus growth; it is light and durable; it is easily worked into any shape, and it has a long fatigue-limit (withstands strains, twists, shakes, etc.). Furthermore, it is easily repaired and maintained, since breaks may be "cold-patched" on the field or "hot-patched" in the shop.

110-Foot Wing Spread

The 24-place glider will have a wing span of approximately 110 feet and a gross weight of 12,000 pounds. The wing span of the 12-place ship will be about 88 feet, with a gross weight of approximately 6500 pounds. Both are of amphibian design, and can be towed by practically any combat aircraft in the Navy.

Since transport gliders are used primarily for the transportation of troops, rather than material, most of the tests will be conducted by Marine Corps personnel. The gliders will be flown by naval aviators and naval aviation pilots.

Catoe Expected To Take Stand This Morning

brought to the stand all its witnesses in connection with the confession. The defense will answer this morning with testimony by the defendant, and his brother, John Catoe, in an effort to show that the confession was made under threats and duress, and that Catoe was fatigued at the time, due to hours of questioning by police.

Justice Morris may either decide the issue for himself, or if he feels that sufficient facts have been presented on both sides, may turn over to the jury the question of admitting the confession as evidence.

Police Story Is Told

Yesterday Police Lieut. Aubrey M. Tolson told the court of events that followed the defendant's arrest.

"After I had told him that six women had identified him in the line-up as their attacker," said Lieut. Tolson, "he told me that he might as well admit it.

"Then, he told me that he had raped a white woman at Sixteenth and T Streets. He said that he was walking by the apartment house there, and a woman standing in front, asked him if he would do some work for her. He said that he went up into her apartment, and when she was talking with him in the kitchen, he grabbed her.

"She had told him, Catoe said, that her husband wouldn't be home until 1:30. Then he attacked her, choked her, and left her dead on the couch. He also told me that he had taken $20 from a pocketbook in the apartment," the police lieutenant testified.

Recited Other Crimes

The officer also testified that Catoe had told him of other crimes. "I asked him if he had attacked any more women, and he would think a minute, and then snap his fingers in remembrance, and say, 'Oh yes, I remember another'."

Other witnesses on the stand yesterday were Police Sergeant John M. Wise, Detective Sergeant Richard Felber, and two New York City police officers, and two neighbors of the Abramowitzes, Miss Madge Davis and Hugh Stevens.

Miss Davis testified that she heard a scream in the apartment building on the morning of March 8, when Mrs. Abramowitz was murdered. Stevens, who lived in the apartment below the victim, also said that he heard a scream. "After that there was a loud crash, then I heard a scuffle, and then it was very quiet," he told the court.

Deny Blows, Threats

Defense Attorneys Shea, J. Robert Esher and George Boden, in their cross-examination of the police officers queried them continually as to their treatment of Catoe.

All of the officers denied that Catoe had been struck or threatened, and Lieut. Tolson said that three days after the Negro had been arrested, he was given a physical examination to see if he had been harmed in any way.

"Were you arming yourself for the prosecution so soon?" Defense Attorney Shea asked him.

"No, it's just that I've had so many cases where police brutality is charged, that I prepare myself," was the reply.

Jurors Get Privileges

Following the testimony yesterday, Justice Morris called the jury back to the courtroom, and announced that a session would be held today from 9:30 a. m. to noon.

"I realize the inconvenience of your being locked up," he said, "and so with agreement of counsel, I will permit you, under guard, to attend a football game in the afetrnoon, and you may take a bus ride, or listen to musical programs during the weekend," he informed them. "Of course, you will not discuss this case with anyone, not even among yourselves."

Labor Lack Hurts British Output, Biggers Says

New York, Oct. 17. (AP)—Great Britain is now encountering labor shortages, John D. Biggers, special minister to England, said today on his return from Europe by clipper.

"They lack the manpower to maintain a big navy, a large army and a great air force, and at the same time obtain maximum industrial output," Biggers declared. "They are not getting the full production of which their plants are capable. They are making up part of the labor shortage by bringing many thousands of women into the factories."

Biggers, who has been in England since September 9, devoted his time to synchronizing British and American production problems. After a visit to his home in Toledo, Ohio, he will report to Harry L. Hopkins, lend-lease administrator, on Monday and perhaps confer with President Roosevelt later.

Asked about the possibility of England and the United States outstripping German production, he replied:

"We don't know enough about German production. We don't know just how tight we are going to buckle our own belts here in the United States."

SAYS FAREWELL TO FEDERAL SERVICE—Secretary of Labor Perkins (left) presents wrist watch to Samuel Gompers, son of the famous labor leader, who retired yesterday after 54 years of Federal service. Gompers was chief clerk of the Labor Department

Samuel Gompers, the son of labor's famous leader, said goodby to Federal Government service yesterday after 54½ years of it and without philosophizing over the vertical versus the craft shop or whither any of them are drifting.

Rather, he told hundreds of employes in the Labor Department, where he was chief clerk, who came with the Secretary of Labor to grasp his hand in farewell, that "for nearly 60 years I've been looking at an alarm clock. Now I can say to hell with it."

They gave him a wrist watch and typewriter as parting gifts and held the reception for him in the Secretary's office. Gompers left them, to do what comes to mind but to try and write his memoirs of his career in the Government service.

This, he began on April 22, 1887, in the Government Printing Office, with the job of compositor. Working there in various capacities for 20 years, he took a Civil Service examination and was appointed to the then Department of Commerce and Labor, working in the Division of Publications and with the Census. With creation of the Labor Department, he was made chief of the Division of Publications and Supplies and became chief clerk in 1918. He served under four Secretaries, Wilson, Davis, Doak and Perkins.

Deeply interested in labor, in the father-to-son tradition, Gompers never was active in it because of his official connection. This he had told reporters on the many anniversaries of his service when people came to congratulate him. Again yesterday he repeated his self-imposed silence of publicly discussing labor.

Gompers lives here at 2517 North Capitol Street.

'Miss Energy' To Be Chosen At Food Show

Sponsored by the Independent Food Distributors of the District, Washington's second annual gigantic food show will open Monday night in Riverside Stadium, Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest, for a week's run.

One of the features of the show will be the "Miss Energy" contest, staged under the auspices of the Employing Bakers Association of the District. Winner of the contest will be acclaimed next Friday night and her reward will be a complete clothing outfit. Cash prizes will be given girls who finish in second and third places.

More than two dozen girls already have registered for the competition. Applications may be filed at food show headquarters, Room 4, Tower Building, Fourteenth and K Streets Northwest. The competition is opened to all girls between the ages of 18 and 25, and they will be judged on the basis of beauty and health.

Seventy-five booths will be set up in the huge auditorium for this year's show and a red-white and blue color scheme will be employed in keeping with the national defense movement. Booths will be given over to the Red Cross, the D. C. Council of National Defense and similar organizations.

Five grocery chain groups—the District Grocery Stores, Good-Will Food Stores, Capitol Food Stores, Nation-Wide Service Stores and United Food Stores—are affiliated with the show. Gort Reveals Lack of British Armored Units

(This is the second of three articles by W. W. Chaplin, who was attached to the British Expeditionary Force on the Western Front during 1939-40, highlighting the official military dispatches of Viscount Gort, commander in chief of the BEF, which have just been made public.—Editor's Note.)

By W. W. Chaplin
International News Service Staff Writer

The British Expeditionary Force which met defeat on the western front and was evacuated from Dunkerque was forced to face the mechanized German army without a single armored division, it has been disclosed in the official military dispatches of Viscount Gort.

The B. E. F. was completely motorized, but in mechanization it was so weak that "from the outset" the enemy had a tremendous advantage, Gort wrote.

There were some scattered units of light tanks, many obsolete and almost everyone armed with but a single machine gun.

Asked Armored Division

On the 12th of May, 1940, two days after the Germans had entered Holland and Belgium, Gort requested the British war office to expedite dispatch of the first armored division. He asked that it be shipped to the nearest available port, "loaded" with a view to immediate battle on arrival.

"I was advised," Gort wrote, "that two armored brigades of this division would disembark at Havre on 16th of May. I therefore sent instructions to the commander. He was to move with all speed to secure the crossings of the Somme west of Amiens with a view to the moving of his division to join the main body of the B. E. F.

"However, in the meantime, orders had been issued locally to concentrate the division south of the Seine, and the plan to cross the Somme and join the B. E. F. proved impossible to execute. The division therefore remained in the lines of communication area and never came under my effective command."

Nullifies Victory Chance

The conclusions Gort drew from the lessons of France was that lack of such modern equipment as armored divisions nullifies any army's chances of victory.

"The days are past," he said, "when armies can be hurriedly raised, equipped and placed in the field, for modern war demands the ever increasing use of complicated material."

Although British officialdom hesitated for long to lay Gort's stark picture before the public, the moment apparently has come when such publication is considered necessary to curb any concerted popular demand for a new B. E. F. before Britain is ready.

So in these dispatches he flatly charges that the B. E. F. was insufficiently manned with trained soldiers, that the armored equipment was no match for the Germans, that aerial support was inadequate, that ammunition continually ran down to danger point, and that there was even so little food that the whole British Army of 250,000 men in France had to be placed on half rations during the height of the fighting.

"It was clear from the outset," he wrote, "that the ascendency in equipment which the enemy possessed played a great part in the operations.

Nazis Well Equipped

"He was able to place in the field and to concentrate no less than 10 armored divisions in the area which he selected and later to employ at least five of these against the British rearward defenses.

"On the other hand, the British armored forces in the theatre of war amounted to seven divisional cavalry regiments equipped with light tanks, one regiment of armored cars of an obsolete pattern, and two battalions of infantry tanks, the latter, except for 23 Mark II tanks, being armed each with one machine gun only."

I have often watched Gen. Gort stamping around at review of these tanks in France, making no attempt to conceal his dissatisfaction with their makeup and performance. I have seen him driving past a column of them on the march, glowering as if by the strength of his will, he wanted to lay more armor on them and place guns in their open unprotected turrets, capable of putting up some sort of fight against the Nazi mechanized monsters.

Shortage Known in England

Gort made plain that the poor equipment of the B. E. F. was a known fact at home.

"I had, on several occasions, called the attention of the war office to the shortage of almost every nature of ammunition," he wrote. "The stocks in France were not nearly large enough to permit of the rates of expenditure laid down for sustained operations before the war.

"There was a shortage of guns in some of the antitank regiments of the Royal artillery, while armor-piercing shells for field guns had not, by May 10 (date of the German invasion of Holland and Belgium), been provided.

"The ammunition immediately available to the B. E. F., was 300 rounds per gun." This last was on May 23.

Gort also disclosed that he was hampered throughout the existence of the B. E. F. by a shortage of labor needed to build defenses against the expected German drive. In March of 1940 he asked for three divisions of soldiers and three divisions arrived in April, assigned to perform heavy labor tasks and at the same time to complete their training as fighting men.

When the military crisis preceding Dunkerque arrived such untrained soldiers had to be flung into the breach to meet the trained German forces.

British Pilots Find Airacobra 'Best Pursuit Plane in Air'

By J. Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

A Fighter Station Somewhere in England, Oct. 17.—The United States-built Airacobra has been stamped "the best pursuit plane in the air" by the pilots of the first R. A. F. squadron in Britain using American-made fighter planes, just back from two days of swift forays across the Channel.

The Airacobras shot up a ship in the Channel, riddled harbor installations with cannon and machine-gun fire and returned safely to their base without encountering any German fighters, they reported.

The Canadian, South African, English, Czech and New Zealand pilots of the squadron are confident these planes can best the famed Messerschmitt 109F.

"We were quite impolite to the ship, positively rude to the harbor installations and particularly to some Nazis standing on a pier," said the English squadron leader, a veteran of the Battle of Britain with eight Nazi planes to his credit.

"These planes," he said, "are better than anything we or the Germans have in operation. We are anxious to tangle with the ME109F. I have no doubt of the result."

The pilots agree that the Airacobras will outfight the British Hurricanes at any height and outperform Spitfires at low altitude, although they prefer the Spitfires for high altitude.

(The Airacobra is said to be the fastest single-engined pursuit plane in production in the United States. It is unique in having its engine in the fuselage behind the pilot, driving the propeller by a shaft running beneath the pilot. Manufactured by the Bell Aircraft Corp., at Buffalo and Niagara Falls, N. Y., the Airacobra is the Bell P-39, a low-wing monoplane with an Allison in-line, liquid-cooled engine.)

United States Air Force Lieut. Melvin F. McNickel, a native of Doland, S. Dak., who heads a group of six from Selfridge Field, Mich., helping to put these planes in operation, stood by while the squadron leader enlarged on the virtues of the Airacobra.

"The 37-millimeter cannon the Americans use are fine for shooting up tanks and even submarines, but we wanted faster firing and more ammunition for air-fighting so we changed it to a 20-millimeter cannon," he explained.

The commanding officer of the station said that the tricycle landing gear makes the Airacobra a successful night fighter because "it lessens the chances of nosing over in a rocky landing on a dark field."

He added that early fears that the motor, being behind the pilot, might break loose and crush him were dispelled when fliers escaped unhurt from two forced landings.

Vichy Sentences Army Plotters

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Oct. 17.—Army men implicated in plots that were centered in Syria and Algeria were sentenced today by the military tribunal at Clermont-Ferrand.

In the first affair the accused men were convicted, in absentia, and received heavy sentences. A medical major was sentenced to death and a noncommissioned officer and soldier each given terms of 10 years for desertion, involving a plot under arms.

Lighter penalties were imposed on three other officers accused of plotting in Algiers, last May, to the detriment of the state but not involving a foreign power. The defendants were present in court Maj. Loustounau-Lacau was sentenced to two years in prison with confiscation of property, present and future. Accomplices, Maj. Faye and Capt. Baufre, were given five and two months in prison respectively.

The evidence accused them of framing a military and diplomatic plan contrary to French national security. The wording of the communique would indicate that in both instances the charge was of Gaullist activities.

Rich is chairman of music, and William E. Braithwaite will be song leader and Paul DeLong Gable the pianist.

Library Membership Shows Increase

A constant growth in membership has been shown in the Washington Catholic Library, at 1822 H Street Northwest, since its establishment eight months ago, leaders of the project reported yesterday.

The purpose of the Washington Catholic Library is to furnish to citizens of Washington access to authoritative Catholic books and to other literature generally on easy rental terms.

While on its shelves can be found most of the standard works on Catholic doctrine, the library does not limit itself to such works. In addition to sections on religion, theology and philosophy, it has large and growing sections devoted to biography, fiction, mystery stories, poetry, essays, drama, politics and foreign affairs. Books are constantly being acquired and the library has almost twice as many volumes today as when it opened.

"SUN OF MY SOUL"
—JOHN KEBLE—
Sun of my soul! Thou Saviour dear,
It is not night if Thou be near;
Oh, may no earth-born cloud arise
To hide Thee from Thy servant's eyes!
Be near to bless me when I wake,
Ere thro' the world my way I take;
Abide with me till in Thy love
I live myself in heav'n above.

Strike Problem Reported Put Up to OPM

Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt was reported yesterday as hopeful that the Office of Production Management would work out a solution of the problem of jurisdictional disputes which affect the defense program from time to time.

Deeply concerned by reports from William S. Knudsen, director general of the OPM, the President is understood here to have asked for a formula to end the internecine labor conflicts.

In the absence of Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the OPM, Knudsen, several days ago, described the retardation of defense orders for the Army and Navy by quarrels between unions. Reports from Hyde Park today that the President had indicated early action by the OPM on defense strikes received varying reactions here.

Industrial quarters close to the OPM felt that the time had come for some form of drastic action to end conflicts between unions which are unrelated to legitimate demands for higher wages, improved working conditions or other normal union aspirations.

In labor quarters it was felt that despite the apparent "bunching" of several jurisdictional strikes several days ago the most disturbing ones have been settled in the last forty-eight hours. These include the dispute which affected 70 per cent of the light tank program, the Alabama Drydock Company strike at Mobile, Ala., and the Ingalls Shipbuilding Company strike at Pascagoula, Miss.

Whatever proposal may be made to end jurisdictional disputes it is unlikely that anything will happen until Hillman returns from the west coast next week and confers with Knudsen.

The difficulty confronting the OPM or any other government agency if it seeks to end inter-labor conflicts by law is that organized labor will oppose such legislation on the ground that by depriving it of the right to strike the Government will be moving towards totalitarianism.

A report prevailed here that Hillman and the A. F. L. were working out an arbitration plan for defense disputes but there was no confirmation.

The reported plan is said to provide for arbitration panels comprising spokesman for labor—industry and the government. One version of the plan has it that a representative of the Arbitration Association of America may be designated as the third party instead of a government official.

Bell Aircraft Strike Vote Set Tomorrow

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 17 (AP).—The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers will vote Sunday on whether to strike at Bell Aircraft Corporation's plants in Buffalo and Niagara Falls, a union official said today.

Leo Lamotte, assistant organization director of the U. A. W., C. I. O.'s aviation division, asserted the action was taken after negotiations for wage increases became stalemated.

Bell produces pursuit hsips for the United States and Great Britain and employs 10,000.

3 Cold-Weather Caps Perfected For U. S. Soldiers

Results of experiments on cold-climate clothing made during the Byrd Antarctic expeditions have been used in the design of three new pieces of soldiers' headgear, standardized by the Army Quartermaster Corps, the War Department announced yesterday.

An olive-drab knitted cap, a knitted toque or stocking cap, and a cloth hood, designed for protection of the head and neck during cold weather, will be used by soldiers this winter.

Dr. Paul Siple, who for several months has been assisting the quartermaster general, was directly responsible for designing the new cloth hood. Adapted from the Eskimo parka for Army use in freezing, wind-swept posts, the hood is made of tightly woven wind-and-water-resistant poplin. Tightening a drawstring brings the hood together in front to cover almost the entire face.

The new cap may be worn up over the ears, but includes a snug shawl which may be turned down when necessary to protect ears and neck.

"I am one of those who feel that Mayor LaGuardia has rendered fine public service in the position which he has htld for two terms, and I am strongly in favor of his reelection."

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post's Church Editor

More than 1000 worshipers, including 28 bishops of the Episcopal Church and many other prominent clergy and laymen, yesterday filled Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Baltimore to participate in consecration rites of the Very Rev. Noble Cilley Powell, D. D., as bishop-coadjutor of the Maryland Diocese.

Marching in the procession that opened the colorful ceremonies were church dignitaries, resplendent in brilliant scarlet, purple, yellow and white ceremonial robes; the vested choir of Emmanuel Church, and representatives of educational, civic and church societies.

Episcopal Procession

The churchmen were headed by the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church; and the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; the Right Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, Bishop of Maryland; the Right Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, Bishop of Ohio, and brother of the Presiding Bishop; Bishop Thomas C. Darst, of East Carolina Diocese; Bishop James Gravatt, of Upper South Carolina; the Right Rev. Robert E. L. Strider, Bishop of West Virginia, and the Right Rev. Hunter Wyatt-Brown, Bishop of Harrisburg, Pa.

Sunlight streamed through the windows of the historic church as Bishop Tucker invested the former Dean of Washington Cathedral with the chimere, the black and white silk habit of a bishop, and placed the pectoral cross, a gift of Emmanuel Church, about his neck. On his finger was placed the Episcopal ring, presented by the Episcopal clergy of Maryland.

Watching proudly from a pew was the new bishop's 85-year-old mother, Mrs. Benjamin S. Powell, who traveled from her home in Alabama for the services in the church where Dr. Powell served as rector for six years before coming to the Washington Cathedral.

"Gift of the Spirit"

Bishop Helfenstein was co-consecrating officer; Bishop Strider, gospeler and Bishop Wyatt-Brown, epistoler. Bishop Tucker, of Ohio, delivered the charge to the new bishop-coadjutor, and preached the sermon, and Bishops Gravatt and Darst presented him for consecration.

The Ohio bishop, in his message, emphasized that the bishop's office is "a gift of the spirit and of the Ascended Christ," and urged that the office be regarded primarily as a spiritual function."

"The real function of a bishop through the centuries, when he has been true to his spiritual gift," said the prelate, "has been to be a center of unity between his diocese and to be a bond of peace and fellowship between the dioceses committed to his care and other dioceses, missionary jurisdictions and Christian groups throughout the world."

Four separate rituals, bearing all the traditional beauty and solemnity of the Episcopal Church, made up the consecration service—morning prayer, administration of Holy Communion to the Bishop-elect and his family, the Litany and the actual consecration.

The bishops, clergy and guests attended a luncheon after the services, and a public reception last night at the Diocesan House.

By Marian H. Barre
The Post's Bridge Editor

With six championships at stake in the District of Columbia Bridge Tournament at the Shoreham Hotel, two were concluded yesterday. The women's pair title went to Mrs. James H. Lemon and Mrs. Winslow Van Devanter, of Washington, who won 617½ match points. The new event for men's pairs was captured by James H. Lemon and L. R. Watson, jr., of Washington, with 184½ points.

Yesterday's session followed Thursday's curtain-raiser. Fifty-two pairs made up the women's field, the largest that has played here since the 1937 national championships. In play for the first time on a District program, the men's event drew a more limited field.

Runners-up in the women's contest were Mrs. J. P. Dalger and Mrs. J. Zelskind, of Baltimore, with 614½ points. Other winners were: Third, Mrs. N. A. Olmstead and Mrs. Henry Fischer, Washington, 584 points; fourth, Mrs. C. W. Zimmer, Washington, and Mrs. Vincent Fuller, Philadelphia, 381½ points, and fifth, Mrs. N. T. F. Robinson, Washington, and Mrs. Allan Rutherford, Baltimore, 280½ points.

Runners-up in the men's matches were N. J. McHugh and E. J. McMahon, Washington, 180 points, and other winners were: Third, Jefferson Glick, Coral Gables, Fla., and B. O. Johnson, Spartanburg, N. C., 177½ points; fourth, O. M. Beerhoff and Col. Edward Clifford, Washington, 160 points, and fifth, A. L. Scott and A. M. Sheppard, Washington, 164½ points.

The men's trophy is the New President's Cup, gift of P. E. Henninger, chairman of the tournament committee. The Columbia Trophy for women's pairs has been in competition since 1936. Defending champions were Mrs. Frederick Eberson and Mrs. H. G. Campbell.

Mrs. Leon Landauer, of Norfolk, and Leroy Thurtell, Washington luminary, defending the mixed pair event, were in eighth place at the close of the first session on Thursday evening. The leaders were Mrs. J. E. Follins, of Richmond, and B. G. Johnson, of Spartanburg, N. C., who scored 436 match points for a 32-point lead over Mrs. Edward Behrend and Joseph Grinsfelder, Baltimore.

The major championship for mixed pairs will be played in two rounds today, with a qualifying session in the afternoon. Teams surviving elimination will compete in the finals tonight. Bridge experts from all over the country are flocking here for this game.

Firm, Attorneys Hopeful Of Reinstating Deanna

Hollywood, Oct. 17 (INS).—Hopeful of erasing the name of Deanna Durbin, golden-voiced actress, from Hollywood's blacklist, Universal Studio executives announced tonight that a conference with the film star's attorneys has been scheduled tomorrow.

The actress was suspended without pay last night after she reportedly refused to attend a studio confab on a forthcoming picture called "They Lived Alone." Deanna was slated to play a newspaper girl, a role she did not like.

'1-Man' Elephant Chained and Shot After Rampage

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 17 (AP).—Teddy, a 25-year-old "one man" carnival elephant who went on a rampage last night after his keeper failed to provide him with drinking water during a three-day absence, early tonight was chained to an oak tree at Camp Polk Prison Farm and shot to death.

The elephant, whose 4-foot tusks were the pride of his trainer, Henry Clay, Providence, R. I., Negro, had gone on rampages at Lewiston, Me., and Waterville, Me. Last night he crushed four automobiles and a truck at the State Fairgrounds. Clay had been absent for several days.

Teddy's rage vanished when tubs of water were placed within his reach.

'Bootleg' Milk Inquiry Yields No Evidence

Whether any "bootleg" milk came into the District last week probably will remain an unsolved mystery, it appeared yesterday.

Dr. Reid R. Ashworth, chief of the Health Department's bureau of food inspection, said his men had found no evidence of any illegally imported milk but would continue the checkup they began yesterday.

The hunt for such tell-tale remnants of "bootlegging" as unaccounted-for milk cans was launched by Dr. Ashworth's inspectors after publication of a story in The Post yesterday disclosing shipment last week of an undetermined quantity of milk from New York State.

A Federal weekly report revealing a demand for the product from the Washington area touched off the search. Under present laws and regulations, milk intended for fluid consumption cannot be imported into the District from New York. Whether the milk was consigned to nearby Maryland or Virginia is problematical.

Meanwhile, C. I. Dunn, Federal market administrator for the Washington area, reported that 24,657,406 pounds of milk was disposed of in the city proper last month. The average minimum price paid producers was $3.21 a hundredweight.

our contribution to Defense

The demands of Defense have increased Washington's population beyond all former limits. This increase has come swiftly . . . far more swiftly than most prophets forecast.

One of the foremost needs for Washington's increasing population is expanding transit service. This need is being met.

CAPITAL TRANSIT has been expanding its facilities and efficiency at an accelerating rate for the past several years. Improvements this year are at an all time high.

MORE NEW BUSES AND STREET CARS. During this year, 132 Streamlined Street Cars and 395 New Buses have been delivered or ordered, at a cost of $6,500,000. This is more than double the yearly average of the past two years.

IMPROVED RUSH HOUR SCHEDULES. Staggered hours for government departments have bettered rush hour traffic. This has enabled CAPITAL TRANSIT to improve running time on the majority of rush hour trips.

30% INCREASE IN RUSH HOUR SERVICE (VEHICLE MILES). Today, there are 24% more buses and street cars operating during rush hours than there were a year ago, and each of these operates more miles under the staggered hour plan.

28% MORE PASSENGERS. CAPITAL TRANSIT is carrying 28% more passengers than a year ago. 5½ million more passengers per month.

115% INCREASE IN TRAFFIC-CHECKERS. These men are the eyes and ears of improved service. They watch at 62 points on car and bus lines from 6:00 A. M. to midnight. They count passengers. They check to see if buses and cars are on time. On the basis of their reports service is constantly being improved. (Last year there were 20 of these men. Today there are 43.)

CAPITAL TRANSIT is doing the biggest transportation job in Washington . . . carrying several times the number of passengers of all other means of city transportation combined.

The record shows CAPITAL TRANSIT is improving its service, giving more service. Doing a bigger job than ever before. And doing a more efficient job in spite of increasing traffic congestion.

Nomadic America

A 16-year-old boy and two girls, aged 15 and 14, respectively, have been arrested in Maine and accused of complicity in a roadside murder which is said to have occurred near the Maryland-Pennsylvania border. The motive, as stated in one reported confession by the boy, was to obtain possession of the automobile and trailer in which the victim, a middle-aged man, had given the three a lift. Now the boy and girls are described as runaways from the trailer camp near Alexandria. While it would require a psychiatrist, at least, to unravel all the influences reflected in this strange and disturbing case, this seminomadic environment would doubtless be one of them. It is one of the prices we are having to pay for the defense crowding. But, although nomadism has been given tremendous impetus by the defense program, it is not exactly a new phenomenon in American life. It is the theme of Mr. Steinbeck's famous novel, "The Grapes of Wrath." Even before that novel was written, and even before the great droughts had sent the Okies on their great migrations, however, it was a familiar and increasing phenomenon. The inability to settle down and the physical restlessness of our people betoken a lack of spiritual roots. The phenomenon is no friend of civilization, and, as this case shows, is distinctly unhealthy.

Gort's Dispatches

The story of Dunkerque has been told many times—in newspaper accounts, books, plays, poems and by word of mouth. It will continue to be told as long as the human race respects courage and fortitude in the face of seemingly impossible odds. Now, practically for the first time, the official story of what happened at Dunkerque as well as what happened in the fearful weeks that preceded that epochal evacuation is told in the dispatches of Lord Gort, commander in chief of the British Expeditionary Force in Flanders and France. These dispatches are interesting on more than one account. They are singularly free of recriminations. They tell the unfolding story with soldierly calm and matter-of-factness. And they reveal how hopeless was the Allied position almost from the beginning of the German blitz in May, 1940.

The first difficulty arose from the circumstance that an adequate Anglo-French defense plan in the north could not be worked out as long as Belgium was neutral. For, as long as she remained neutral, the Brussels government was unwilling to hold any staff conversations or make known its position. The British and French forces, therefore, had to plan in the dark. When Belgium was attacked on May 10, however, the plan they put into force had speedily to be scrapped because the plan depended on a far too optimistic view of the Belgian defense system. Then came the German break-through at Sedan. This was soon followed by a drive to the coast and the splitting of the Allied forces which, from the outset, had had to contend with the grave handicap of lack of adequate materiel. By the end of May the situation had become hopeless. The Dutch army had been knocked out by the 15th; the Belgian army had surrendered on May 27; the so-called Weygand plan for a joint Anglo-French counterattack on the German forces that had driven through to the coast never materialized because the French had lost whatever capacity they had once had for offensive action. Nothing was left for the British to do, therefore, but to retreat to the coast, and save what they could of the B. E. F. On May 26, after hearing from the War Office, Lord Gort replied: "I must not conceal from you that a great part of the B. E. F. and its equipment will inevitably be lost even in the best circumstances."

By the closing week of May the outlook was gloomy in the extreme. So much so that Gort was advised by the War Secretary to use his own best judgment. "If you are cut off from us," he was informed, "and all evacuation from Dunkerque and the beaches had, in your judgment, been finally prevented after every attempt to open it had failed, you would become sole judge of when it was impossible to inflict further damage on the enemy." In other words, if the situation became hopeless, and there was no alternative to surrender except a wholly useless loss of life, surrender was to take place. But instead of surrender, there occurred what, with no exaggeration, has been called "the miracle of Dunkerque," an event which becomes even more miraculous when read through Gort's sober dispatches.

Bodeful Events

Little imagination is now needed to see America in the very center of a cosmic storm. No longer are we watching at a safe distance the rumblings of what Mr. Lindbergh calls an "intra-European struggle." The earth is moving under our very feet. Look at the east, and at the gates of Moscow we see in progress the greatest battle in world history. If Hitler wins, the road to Asia will be open to him, a prong into yet another continent abutting upon our Nation. Look to the west, and we see a change of government taking place in Tokyo which gives the reins of power frankly to the Japanese militarists. This is another victory for Hitler. When Moscow falls, the gray-green legions of the Mikado may cross the Manchurian border into Siberia. No man can see the end of such an adventure. But if Japan—which is only 700 miles, anyway, from our Alaskan littoral—should succeed, the Japanese imperialists would find themselves on the stepping stones which lead to Alaska across the short North Pacific divide.

Against the background of these bodeful events the House yesterday agreed to arm our merchantmen. The vote was 259 to 138. It afforded a handsome majority, and doubtless the fresh reverberations of the cosmic storm accounted for it. But the step is like pouring rosewater on a hurricane for all the difference that it will make to Hitler's progress. Something much more drastic must be done in order to keep a step ahead of this would-be conqueror. We must see that neither he nor his Japanese stooge ever gets possession of the approaches to either the Pacific or the Atlantic. This can be done by executive policy. But the President's hands are still tied by the prohibition of the Neutrality Act which forbids our merchant fleet from sailing into combat zones. There should be no loss of time on the part of the House in following up the vote to arm our merchantmen with a bill to throw the last vestige of our neutrality into the discard.

The entire neutrality pretense has done nothing but encourage the Axis powers in the gamble that our country is too confused to act boldly. Hitler has called our naval bluff in the Atlantic. The torpedoing of the U. S. S. Kearny shows that his claim to the oceans, as to the continents, will not be resigned merely at the behest of our naval policemen. In Tokyo the feeling has spread among the navy that our appearance of impotence would be our undoing in a Pacific showdown. There is hope that the Japanese are still pirouetting with their sabers. But in a world in which the aggressor has become king, we can no longer rely upon hopes. The boldest measures still are the safest. And, if the events which are now shaking the spheres do not put a spur into the heads of our legislators, they will reinforce the troubled conclusion of James Monroe in 1822 that free governments have neither the foresight nor the virtue to provide at the proper season for great emergencies. What is needed now is the scrapping of the ragged remains of the Neutrality Act in a signal demonstration.

Green Vs. Arnold

When William Green, reelected president of the American Federation of Labor for his eighteenth year, brought down his gavel for the last time at the Seattle convention, that body had notably strengthened its stand against racketeering in the labor movement. But it had also condemned the one public official who is doing more than any other to put the racketeers where they belong. The vicious and unfounded attack upon Thurman Arnold, head of the Department of Justice's antitrust division, goes a long way toward undermining the A. F. of L.'s avowed interest in wiping out the rule of unscrupulous union bosses.

Mr. Arnold was denounced as a "false crusader" and a reactionary foe of labor. Why? Because, forsooth, he has tried to enforce the law impartially. When unions restrain interstate trade by fixing prices, by preventing the use of modern industrial methods, by compelling the hiring of employes who do no work, or by smashing legitimate collective bargaining units, their activities are just as indefensible as any conspiracy of employers in restraint of trade. It has been the task of Mr. Arnold to enforce the law in respect of both these types of unfair practice. To be sure, the Supreme Court has in some instances rejected his interpretation of the law as applied to labor organizations. But that merely emphasizes the necessity for clarification of the law so that racketeering and antisocial practices cannot be carried on under the cloak of collective bargaining.

It is a well-known fact that some of the cases which Mr. Arnold has prosecuted involve the right of collective bargaining itself. He has attempted to prevent unscrupulous groups from crushing unions that have been certified by the NLRB as the proper collective bargaining unit. Some of the chaos in labor relations which is now interrupting the production of war supplies arises out of the fact that unions have been left free to stop the flow of interstate commerce. Thus they have defeated the purpose of the Labor Relations Act which was enacted for the benefit of all working men. Racketeers are certain to flourish if collective bargaining units established by the rank and file may thus be legally put out of action by boss-ridden combinations.

The A. F. of L. ought to be cooperating with Mr. Arnold to stop practices of this kind instead of assuming a lofty immunity to the rules of fair play. If aid to the countries fighting Hitler is to be made effective, Government and the great labor organizations must pull together to end abuses which impair production and make labor an easy victim of attack.

War Potential

The Army in wartime has never been distinguished for yielding to the material requirements of civilians. In its view—and rightly so within all possible sufferance—military needs come first. Of special interest, therefore, is the testimony of Brig. Gen. Rutherford, executive officer to the Undersecretary of War, that all metal-manufacturing concerns will be needed for munitions production. If this proves to be the case, we shall have further striking evidence of the sacrifice necessary to attain our full war potential. Last week Stacy May, chief of the OPM Bureau of Research and Statistics, estimated our potential military production to be two and one-half times that of the United Kingdom and Canada. Yet, he pointed out, the United Kingdom and Canada are now actually outstripping us by a wide margin.

This is not to say, of course, that we shall continue to be outstripped. The War Department has reported substantial increases in munitions production. During the past three weeks, for example, five new Government-owned plants, some of them completed ahead of schedule, have started turning out rifle and machine gun ammunition, shells for infantry mortars, and high explosive TNT for bombs, shells and torpedoes. But only a few plants have reached maximum production. Some are still building, and there are some for which no contracts have been let, though Congress has made available the necessary funds.

This, of course, is merely one aspect of our production program. But it does illustrate the truth of Mr. May's statement that we have a long way to go to reach our maximum war potential. Copper for most civilian purposes has been "tight" for some time. Considering the requirements not only of plants still to be built but also of existing plants whose demand for copper will increase as they approach their maximum output, it is clear that copper will stay tight until well after the emergency. For this situation there is no help. The only solution so far as civilian needs are concerned—and it is inevitably a makeshift solution—is the creation and adaptation of serviceable substitutes for copper. This involves a challenge of American ingenuity and enterprise which we have yet to meet.

Premarital Tests

The showing, in the physical examination of draftees, of the prevalence of syphilis gives special interest to syphilis statistics released by the Council of State Governments. The figures are interesting also for another reason. They show that in States where premarital examinations are required, the syphilis rate among marrying persons has decreased. Only 1.28 per cent were found to have been infected during the past five years in States where tests have been required long enough to show results. This figure is low when compared with the 3.24 per cent estimate for adults during the 1935-40 period, released by the American Social Hygiene Association. More specific figures show that Connecticut, where blood tests have been required since 1936, reported only 1903 cases last year as against 2494 in 1936. Similar results were noted in Rhode Island.

The decline in the disease is so marked as to testify to the efficacy of the premarital test. In legally touching the lives of all marrying couples within its jurisdiction, it emphasizes the horror of homes invaded by venereal disease as no amount of preaching could do. It also gives society a weapon against the shiftless and "hush-hush" attitudes which have been obstacles in the way of movements to control social disease. A local premarital law requiring tests for syphilis, gonorrhea, and tuberculosis has been in subcommittee awaiting hearing since middle June. But the advisability of enacting such an omnibus measure is questionable, and it would be well to begin with syphilis. That this is a great problem locally was shown in our recent discussion of its prevalence among District men called up by the draft.

HARVEST

My heart was once like any orchard-bough
That bears the leaf, the blossom, and the fruit;
And still, I think, it would be bearing now
Had sorrow gnawed less keenly at the root.

I think, about this season, it would be
Down-bent with some sweet harvest, ripe and red.
But look upon that piteous bough and see
The stunted fruit, the fatted worm, instead.

Balance

Last winter John Dewey, distinguished and some say only American philosopher, expressed the belief that we are now living in "one of the three or four most fateful periods of all history." If this is the case, we undoubtedly have more to think about than the vicissitudes of Adolf Hitler. We have got to think about a situation of turmoil and chaos in which Hitler was the fellow who threw the first rock.

Interventionists and noninterventionists can agree that the aftermath of the present wars will be no picnic. Can the cooperation of all nations be brought about to the end that the world's energies and resources are not wasted in competition? Can the reconstruction of Europe and China be "financed" by the United States as reconstruction was financed after the last war? Can there be an appeasement of the world's sorrows without an appeasement of the ambitions of the world's politicians?

If these and many associated questions are not answered by the people of the United States, then interference and nonintervention becomes isolation indeed. Much mock is made of neutrality, yet in a sense neutrality is an ideal which no State can afford to spurn. It is the neutrality in man that has created justice, diplomacy, and discussion. Neutrality is balance, and was the world ever in greater need of balance than it is today?

The American people have indicated a hope for the defeat of Hitler. Fortunately, however, their judgment goes deeper than this. They are at a loss to see how the defeat of Hitler in itself will cure much. Their position is still neutral, therefore, with respect to the larger situation of world ferment and world anarchy. Not having discovered the answer to the greater problem, they hesitate to commit themselves to what may be called a partial solution. Let us, therefore, not call for an end of discussion, as some are already doing. Let us not cement shut the well springs of our knowledge, our inquiry, and our good judgment. Let every man in America with honest conviction and intelligent access to the sources of data speak with us in an hour when democracy is called upon to function brilliantly in leadership rather than in self-interested defense and mere name calling across the seas.

Aid For Russia

Mr. William Atwood of Detroit wrote in a letter published in The Washington Post on October 15 that "It should be obvious to even President Roosevelt by now as to what kind of a sport Great Britain is."

It will be recalled that when France, Belgium and Holland were struggling under the aegis of democracy, Russia—referred to by Mr. Atwood as proof for his peculiar deliberations—decided to remain "neutral," thus failing to tip the scales in favor of an Allied victory.

The same flag of neutrality was waved by Russia when diplomatic pressure was brought to bear on the Balkan states by the powerful Axis statesmen, and later also when Yugoslavia and Greece were invaded.

So, if England is cooperating with Russia within the realm of her limited military resources, her efforts should be appreciated—especially since these efforts represent only part of a scheme by the civilized nations (including, of course, the United States) to stem the tide of Hitlerism.

Geographical Policies

What a great many of our people do not understand in the present crisis is that there are no choices in foreign policy. Each country has one and only one. If the people of a country, at any time, fail to realize this they court disaster. The best example in this respect is France. Certain people in France thought there was a choice. Their choice was appeasement. They preferred that to taxing themselves for rearming. They were under the mistaken impression that France could abandon her historic foreign policy by appeasing the danger. We can see the results of their policy. In England, too, there were people who preferred to abandon traditional British policy because they thought appeasement could be set up in its stead. That almost brought England to disaster.

In this country there are many people who think we can abandon our traditional foreign policy which is to make sure that the seas are controlled by ourselves or friendly powers. We always have endeavored to keep unfriendly powers at a safe distance. That is why we proclaimed the Monroe Doctrine, which has become the cornerstone of our foreign policy. Why has this doctrine never been changed? Because the foreign policy of a nation is determined by its geographical position, not by the government in power. (Russia, for instance, is as vitally concerned in the Dardanelles under the Soviets as she was under the czars.)

Yet, in spite of 120 years of this policy, which has been strikingly successful, we have people here who doubt its value. They would put up appeasement in its place rather than assume the sacrifices which this policy demands. But patriotic Americans must know that our foreign policy must be maintained even if the cost is war. We have never before dared to let the control of the seas slip out of our own and friendly hands. It is unwise to assume that we can do so now, in fact it may be disastrous.

It would seem that the forces opposing the country's foreign policy are not so much motivated by lack of patriotism as by a lack of realization of this oneness of foreign policy. Let us all hope that more and more Americans will understand that there are no choices and, come what may, our only choice must be supported.

Pressure Groups

The present epoch will be known in the future as an era of special privileges freely granted by the Government to the pressure groups in Washington. Chief of these are those of labor, which has a powerful lobby and which exerts great influence because of its voting strength. The favors which it has already secured are largely responsible for present widespread strikes at a time when strikes are particularly hard upon the public.

The other great pressure group is, of course, agriculture, which brazenly demands appropriations out of the Treasury to make up the difference between incomes previously prevailing and those of today. Both of these pressure groups are favored by enormously expensive departments of the Goverment with representation in the President's Cabinet. When at last there shall be an intelligent demand for the abolition of all special privilege, these two groups should be the first to be examined with the resulting program of special privileges to none.

Lease-Lend Votes

I read with a great deal of interest your editorial entitled "Realistic House" in The Washington Post on Sunday, October 12. This editorial points out that there has been an impressive gain in the support of the lease-lend program since the passage of the Lease-Lend Act, and it goes on to compare the vote in the House on the passage of the act with the vote in the House on the passage of the second appropriation bill implementing the act. As a matter of fact, an accurate comparison would be that made between the first appropriation bill implementing the act, which passed the House on March 19, H. R. 4050, in which the vote was 336 "Yes" and 55 "No," and that which passed the House this past Friday on which the vote was 328 "Yes" and 67 "No."

While there has been some change, obviously, in the vote of the House, the change should accurately be analyzed in the light of comparative legislation. The first lease-lend appropriation received votes from six members who voted "No" on the final passage of the lease-lend appropriation. The first lease-lend appropriation did not receive a vote either "Yes" or "No" from eight members of the House who voted "No" on the last lease-lend appropriation. The first lease-lend appropriation received four "No" votes from members who voted "Yes" on the last lease-lend appropriation.

Summing it all up briefly, the comparative vote should be—first appropriation measure 336 "Yes," 55 "No." Second appropriation measure 328 "Yes," to 67 "No."

Simply for the accuracy of the record in knowing that your paper did not mean to make a faulty comparison, I present these figures that you might publish them in an equally important space in your newspaper. They present an entirely different picture from that conveyed in the editorial "Realistic House."

Too Much Discussion

Discuss . . . discuss . . . discuss. Roosevelt discusses with Churchill, Beaverbrook discusses with Harriman, etc., etc. Every time we or the British get very worried, we are assured that there will be another "discussion."

Meantime, the fate of the British and of America are being decided by the Russians. If they lose, the British will be a mop-up operation. As for us, we will be engaged with Japan, our western flank exposed to Hitler's fleets and bombers.

The Russians have begged the British to attack now in the west. Every day the brave little peoples in the conquered countries are trying to tell the British the same thing by their actions. The British people and many of her leaders are asking and demanding the Russian call be heeded. They know that to wait is fatal.

To let the Russians fight alone now will mean that America will not avoid war and will fight alone later. It will not be Germany that will fight on two front, but America—against Germany, Japan, and all their allies who want to be on the winning side.

America and Britain must strike now!

Good Times Coming

For those who, in these "Liberty or Death" days have no faith in our Government:

Hey! Cheer Up! The world doesn't belong to Hitler or to his kind, but to you, to me, and to all mankind. So wake up, and cheer up! Soon the world will feel a new era. And our country will be bigger and better.

The Post Impressionist

"La Vieillarde"

Did you ever talk to anyone who remembered the British burning of the Capitol and the White House in 1814, remembered these incendiarisms when they were actually current events? Well, I talked more than once to an old woman who vividly remembered the Battle of Waterloo, which was fought only one year later. She was a Belgian peasant, a true Wallon, and when I knew her, slightly, she lived, with several great-grandchildren, or perhaps even more remote descendants, in a cottage on the outskirts of the town of Quatre Bras, the town nearest to the Field of Waterloo, and, in fact, the name which the French give to that battle. During my school years, which were spent mostly in Brussels, we boys used to make frequent excursions, hiking or a-wheel, out into the surrounding countryside, and I often formed one of a little group who listened with awe to this link with the remote past.

She was born in the year 1800—well documented in the parish register—and I believe she survived until about 1912, according to what I afterwards heard. But the last time I can remember seeing her was probably not later than 1905 (my last year in a Brussels school), when she would have been approximately 105 years of age. Like most other "local characters" in small towns the world over, she had her little stunt, which she would perform, if she were in the mood, and if the prospects of largess were bright.

Her stunt consisted in reading aloud two or three short paragraphs from any Belgian or French newspaper, which her visitors might produce themselves, so as to be sure that she had not committed the contents to memory, but reading them without eyeglasses! The explanation was that she had been completely illiterate about half of her entire life, not having learned to read until she was well past 80 years old, and I doubt if she ever did learn to write; at least I never saw her do so, there being no autograph craze amongst us boys. Consequently, she had not strained her eyes in youth, and they were strong and clear, and very blue, in her vigorous old age.

Although she could read correct French, she couldn't speak it, and when performing her little stunt she pronounced the French words in the Wallon manner, necessitating strict attention on the part of her auditors to follow, and sometimes even to guess, what she was reading aloud. I suppose that by now this ancient quasi-French dialect must be nearly extinct, what with several generations of compulsory, free state education in Belgium and France, and, more recently, that new and leveling influence, radio broadcasting. But in my childhood Wallon was still the daily speech of thousands of peasants and townsfolk—especially the elders—on both sides of the Franco-Belgian frontier, which was an arbitrary sequence of painted posts placed in position because of political, not cultural reasons: the inhabitants east and west of the line were all Wallons.

The old dame had a vivid story to tell of how close she had been to one of the decisive battles of the world, and I never saw reason to doubt the story, for I heard her tell it more than once, and the telling was always about the same. In her girlhood that part of the Low Countries was under French rule, and she must often have heard, and perhaps joined in the exultant cry, "Vive l' Empereur!" It seems that she, then a girl of about 15, was watching over her father's animals that early morning—whether cattle, goats or sheep (or perhaps all three genera) I don't remember. The family lived somewhere along the road from Brussels to Quatre Bras, and it was, and still is, the thrifty custom of continental European peasantry to send a child out in charge of the domestic animals while they graze on the ownerless grass alongside the highway; it conserves pasturage, and trust a peasant to overlook no conservation project! If you recall your "Vanity Fair," you remember the circumstances of the withdrawal of the Duke of Wellington and his principal officers from the duchess' ball in Brussels, on the eve of Waterloo, "one by one and two by two," until the belles of the ball suddenly found themselves wallflowers.

Well, my old peasant witnessed the sequel, for her story was that shortly after dawn she was obliged to gather the animals hastily against the fence, or hedge bordering the road, while the Iron Duke, his resplendent staff and his cavalry escort clattered past, on the way to Waterloo and historical immortality—for His Grace, at least. Young and thoughtless as I was, it always gave me an eerie sensation to realize that I was in the living presence of one who had witnessed the prelude to history in the making in 1815.

If you visited her cottage more than once and her bright eyes recognized you, there was a tacit obligation to "stooge" a little bit, to ask her leading questions, so that she could get her effects. Thus, "You heard the guns during the Battle of Waterloo, Bonnie-dame?" you were expected to ask her.

"But of a certainty I heard the guns, m'sieu," she would say. It bucked up—a 13-year-old schoolboy—no end to be addressed as "m'sieu."

"And were you not afraid, Bonnie-dame?"

"But, yes, m'sieu, I was very frightened."

"Where were you during the battle, Bonne-dame?"

"I was praying in our village church."

By this time you were cooperating nicely in your "stooging," and becoming quite a hero to your schoolmates. "And where were you after the battle?" you asked.

"I helped the other villagers tend the so-brave wounded."

Then, glancing around the little group of visitors, and trying to determine whether they were preponderantly Belgian, British or French, she would suit her last line to her guess, "Ah, ces beaux soldats Belges (Anglais, Francais)!"

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Three Corners Of The World

AS WAS to be expected, Hitler's advance on Moscow has called forth warlike developments in Japan. The fact that the Navy, which has hitherto been counted as a moderating influence, is now using threatening language makes the situation very ominous indeed. The fall of the Konoye cabinet must make it plain to everyone how serious a crisis has developed.

LIPPMANN

It is so serious that only at extreme peril to the country can Congress refuse to see the situation as it actually is, can the opposition continue to debate these gigantic issues as if it were the President here at home, and not a formidable military alliance abroad, which is drawing us nearer to war.

FOR THE plain fact, known to all who take the trouble to inform themselves, is that Hitler is pushing Japan into a shooting war against the United States while he himself, except for occasional incidents, has thought to avoid open combat. He has been avoiding a general shooting war because he himself has not yet been ready for it. But he would not be making the headway he is making with the Japanese if he were not offering them considerable assurances that he will be able to help them if they go to war with the United States.

Hitler's best negotiators and a swarm of Nazi agents are at work in Tokyo and in occupied China, using the utmost pressure to overcome the moderates who have been conferring with the American government, and to incite the war party. As the Nazi armies have advanced in Russia, the Nazi intrigue in the Far East has, of course, prospered. For in addition to the Japanese ambitions for a great empire in the Pacific, there are the Japanese fears as to what would happen to Japan if the Nazis got to Vladivostok and Japan had not been an active partner of Hitler.

THUS JAPAN is teetering on the edge of a decision which, if taken, will immediately have the gravest consequences for the United States. A Japanese attack on Siberia, especially if the Russians are unable to hold a defensive line at the European end of the trans-Siberian railroad will immediately make Alaska and the North Pacific as exposed an area as is the Atlantic from North America to Greenland, Iceland and the British Isles. Perhaps it will be more exposed. For the Japanese navy is much stronger than the German navy.

A Japanese attack in the south via Indo-China and Thailand in order to isolate China and surround Singapore would be equally serious. For the region of the South Pacific is of the highest strategic importance, both economically and in a military sense. If it falls to Japan, she will have conquered the resources for an almost unlimited expansion of her armed power, and we shall become dependent upon Japan for certain indispensable supplies. Moreover if the Japanese get to Singapore, there will be little to stop them beyond that. They can go to the Indian Ocean, the Red Sea, the Mediterranean, the Atlantic,—the German, Italian, and Japanese navies will be able to join hands and act together.

JAPAN KNOWS, of course, that these grandiose results cannot be accomplished without a full-dress war with Great Britain and the United States, and the sober Japanese know quite well that if they start such a war, they will almost certainly be defeated. Therefore, they must be asking Hitler's agents what help he can give them.

There can be little doubt as to the general character of the Nazi answer. The answer must be that these victories in Russia this season will at least be decisive enough to disengage large armies for a winter campaign elsewhere. Of that much we can be sure. Beyond that one can only speculate as to whether the Nazis will make their main attack in the Middle East towards Suez and the Persian Gulf, or whether they will move on Spain, Portugal, and the west coast of Africa. Either, and much more effectively both, would tie up British and American forces and greatly assist Japan.

THAT SOMETHING of this kind is in the making is in the highest degree probable. It will explain why Hitler is inciting Japan to immediate war against America while he has himself been avoiding war with the United States. Hitler is checked in the North Atlantic and he will not be ready for a large offensive effort in the Middle and South Atlantic until he can use the harbors and air fields of Spain, Portugal, French Africa and the Atlantic islands.

That is why the German navy now avoids combat with our escorts. Hitler is waiting for Japan to enter the war; he is waiting to get himself established for a general war in the Atlantic; he is waiting until everything is ready before he sets in motion all his saboteurs and Fifth Columnists in this hemisphere.

THE SITUATION is grave and from now on we must expect a condition of intensified crisis to the west, to the east, and to the south of us. The pause, resulting from the Russian campaign, is about over, even though the Russians hold somewhere. There may be other pauses. But we must recognize that they are only pauses in the movement of events towards one of the great climaxes of the world struggle.

We shall be tested. There will be tested the capacity of our democratic institutions to be equal to the occasion, and of men to see the truth clearly and without flinching. May we be able to say, adapting Shakespeare's words to ourselves:

"Come the three corners of the world in arms
And we shall shock them!
Naught shall make us rue"

if—and this is always the great if—if America "to itself do rest but true."

The Gallup Poll

69% Favor High School Military Training; Approved by Majority in Every U. S. Section

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 17.—Three hundred and fifty students in two high schools at Cambridge, Mass., have sent a petition to the school committee asking that courses be given in military training.

"When we are drafted," says the student leader of the movement, "the Army course in high school will prove of great value. We want to be ready in the high schools if need arises."

Similar suggestions in the past have met with the criticism that military training in high school would smack too much of the dictator countries, where youngsters study military tactics before they are out of knee-pants.

A nation-wide survey of public opinion by the Institute indicates, however, that the country is in favor of high school military training by a large majority. If school boards throughout the country were to hold public referenda on the issue they would likely find, on the average, that for every ballot cast against the idea, two would be cast in favor.

The Insitute's survey was conducted on the following issue:

"Do you think courses in military training should be given boys in high school in your community?"

Those with opinions voted as follows:

Yes	69%
No	31

This is an issue on which people have no hesitation in expressing an opinion. Only one person in every 25 (4 per cent) was undecided or without an opinion.

The proposal is approved by a majority in every section of the country.

It is not necessary to talk to many voters to discover that a very large proportion of Americans think modern youth needs training in obedience and discipline.

That is the reason most frequently given by those who favor military training in high school.

Others favor the plan because they believe that if the young men ever have to do any fighting later on, they had better learn how to protect themselves in combat.

Voters opposed to the idea of training in high school say that high school boys are too young to be inflicted with rigid military rules, and that they will get such training in draft camps later on.

Columbus' Bones

EVERY YEAR, on Columbus Day, the guide of the Cathedral of Santo Domingo sends the guide of the Cathedral of Sevilla, in Spain, a carefully kept balance of his income in tips derived from showing to tourists the tomb of the discoverer of the Americas. The new head guide of the lovely church in Sevilla, showing his sense of humor, punctiliously retributes the "courtesy." It's a rivalry born from the old argument as to where the bones of Cristopher Columbus actually repose today. Europe or America?

The people of Santo Domingo claim that the Spaniards have in Sevilla the remains of Diego Columbus, son of the discoverer, instead of those of the old admiral.

When Spain ceded the colony of Santo Domingo to France in 1795 the bones of the discoverer were not included in the deal, and the Spaniards ordered the lead coffin to be taken to Havana. The fact that marks on the coffin were missing was explained by historical records which mentioned that the inhabitants of the island, always subjected to plunder by buccaneers and foreign navies, erased all identifications. The Spanish warship Descubridor took the remains with great ceremony to Havana; and when Cuba was lost by Spain as a result of the Spanish-American War, the casket was once more removed and taken to Spain and its resting place in Sevilla. This is the Spanish claim.

Every inhabitant of Santo Domingo but the Consul of Spain has another story. They claim that the Spaniards, on searching the Cathedral of Santo Domingo for the sepulcher, missed the burying grounds of Cristopher Columbus by only 6 inches and took instead the bones of Diego. And here is their explanation:

Until 1877, when extensive repairs to the Cathedral of Santo Domingo were ordered by the archbishop, tradition only kept the hope alive that the remains of the discoverer were still in American soil. Then, however, a search was made for the remains of Diego Columbus. The supposed location of the sepulcher of Cristopher Columbus was uncovered and proved quite empty. The search for Diego's bones within the church were continued until the 10th of September of that year, when a rumor that the real remains of the discoverer had been found electrified the city. The doors of the cathedral were tightly shut, a force of police surrounded the cathedral and the church dignitaries, headed by the archbishop, excitedly hurried to inform the government officials.

Under the expectant eyes of the President of the Republic, foreign diplomats and other officials, a metal coffin was uncovered that bore the following inscription: "D. DE LA A. PER. ATE.", an abbreviation for "Descubridor de la America, Primer Almirante"—"DISCOVERER OF AMERICA, FIRST ADMIRAL"! And its location was exactly 6 inches from the vault which had been emptied nearly a century before by the Spaniards!

Since then books have been written by historians presenting both sides of the story, minute studies have been made of drawings and enlarged photographs of both coffins, caligraphic experts have scrutinized every letter visible on the coffin resting in splendor in Santo Domingo. But a few white bones turning now into dust here in America and in sunny Sevilla tell no more.

EVEN RICH ARGENTINIANS are appalled when they arrive in New York and have to pay $2.50 for a steak dinner. Among South Americans the Argentinians are supposed to be the most colorful speakers of Spanish, which they aid with eloquent gestures when they want to convey their opinion about prices to a startled American waitress!

The roving gauchos of southern Patagonia, offering their services in the widely separated "haciendas," are nomads. They stay a short time in a place and, equipped with long knives carried in the back of their belt and well-cared-for lassos, they ride alone for days and days in the uneven and windy pamps of southern Argentina. Their diets are "mate" and "carne asada," tea and broiled meat. If emergency provisions of "charqui"—dried meat—runs out they will take the nearest lamb or cow out of a herd, kill and skin the animal skillfully, place the skin on the nearest post for the owner to find; will select a large cut of meat and continue on their way. It is no crime in Patagonia to kill an animal for personal need of food; it is a breach, however, to neglect skinning the animal and leave the surface to the owner. The skin is useful for saddles, lassos and boleros.

The poorest people in the Argentine eat meat every day and today they remember well an expression of their favorite American friend, Franklin D. Roosevelt: "One-third of the American Nation is ill-fed."

"Not if we are allowed to help" is the present day rejoinder of the Argentines, which reflects the happy mood brought about by the recent signing of the famous commercial treaty that has been under discussion for nearly a century. Even the protests of Western Senators and Representatives have not dampened the spirit of Argentine cattle owners. "It's all nothing but a misunderstanding," they claim in their press, "if we were allowed to sit down with those Westerners to discuss the matter across the table we would soon be sending fresh meat also." Editorials in Buenos Aires and other cities, commenting upon the new treaty that allows the increase of corned beef, among other products to be shipped to the States, consider this step the biggest defeat Hitler has experienced in South America.

Nazi Cloud Over Asia

By Mark Gayn
Author of the Newly Published "The Flight for the Pacific."

Spies Watch Japan As Well As China

ENTIRE EAST ASIA is blanketed today by a vast, efficient and busy Nazi web, directed from the bustling ports of Japanese-occupied China and rivaling in importance the organizations in Spain, Argentina and the United States.

Within the past fortnight, Berlin underscored the importance it attaches to the Oriental centers by assigning to them the most impressive battery of Nazi "heavy guns" yet sent to any part of the world.

Leading this group was Heinrich Stahmer, one of Hitler's favorite trouble-shooters long before his advent to power. Stahmer's new post is ostensibly ambassadorship to the Japanese puppet regime in Nanking. Actually, he will be one of the two heads of the Nazi web in the entire Western Pacific—for in rank and experience Stahmer is too big a man for the tight shoes of an envoy to a notoriously corrupt and impotent magionnette administration.

Thus far, Stahmer has jealously nursed anonymity. When he visited Japan in September, 1940, his desire for secrecy went to the extent of exerting pressure on the Japanese government through the German embassy to issue a general press ban on reports of his arrival, presence and activities.

Yet, few among Hitler's confidential agents have tackled more difficult assignments or deserved publicity more richly. During the 1937-39 crises in Europe, Stahmer served as Hitler's own ears and tongue in Eastern Europe, just as Capt. Fritz Wiedemann served in Paris and London. Stahmer is also known to have played an important part in laying the groundwork for the Hitler-Stalin pact of 1939.

STAHMER'S greatest achievement was the Triple Axis Alliance of 1940. The task involved persuasive ability, tact and forcefulness of the highest order—for Stahmer's double assignment was to talk Japan into the pact and to convince the Kremlin not to take umbrage at the alliance.

Stahmer arrived in Moscow in August, 1940—as usual in great secrecy. He met the Soviet leaders and persuaded them that the projected Axis accord was directed not against Russia but against the United States and Britain. From Moscow, Stahmer carried to Tokyo Russia's assurances of neutrality should Japan became involved in a war with the democracies.

This pledge Stahmer and the pro-Axis elements in the Japanese army and cabinet used with the effectiveness of a sledgehammer to end the hesitation of Japan's moderates. Within two weeks, the Tokyo privy council approved the anti-American pact, and on September 27—in Hitler's presence—it was signed in Berlin.

Stahmer's next assignment was again in Moscow, to prepare the ground for the Matsuoka-Stalin nonaggression agreement of last April. Once again, he heavily seasoned his arguments with sugar-coated threats of a German-Japanese pincer squeeze.

In his new post in Nanking, he will share the direction of the Nazi diplomatic, economic and espionage activities in the Far East with Lieut. Gen. Eugen Ott, Ambassador to Tokyo, and one of the authors of the Anti-Comintern Pact of 1936. Ott until now has been the ranking party official in the Western Pacific. Since the withdrawal of the German Ambassador from China he has also been the senior diplomat.

I was in Shanghai late in 1937, when Ott, then military attache to the Embassy in Tokyo, paid a flying visit to the city to chastise the German newspapermen for their anti-Japanese war reports. The correspondents, genuinely amazed by the heroic Chinese resistance and ever mindful of Japan's inroads into the German-Chinese trade, were sending to their newspapers reports which made the Japanese army see red.

The pressure on Berlin became so great that orders were rushed to Ott to return the German correspondents to the path of righteousness. He did—with such effectiveness that the tone of the reports changed almost overnight. The newspapermen swore lustily, admitted the meeting was "bloody unpleasant," but would tell no more.

Stahmer's chief assistant in occupied China will be Fritz Wiedemann, who is to be stationed in North China. Wiedemann's movements have been shrouded with secrecy since he left the German Consulate-General in San Francisco, but South American reports have indicated that he had visited Berlin and was carrying with him to the Orient detailed instructions from Hitler and Von Ribbentrop.

THE FACT that Berlin is willing to doom one of its most important diplomatic and party officials to virtual exile in Peiping is the best proof of Germany's intention to expand her activities in China. There are two guesses on Wiedemann's assignment: one is that Germany expects complete Soviet collapse in the near future and the subsequent reestablishment of the trade "life-lines" from the Orient to the Reich across Russia; the other is that Hitler confidently expects Japan to plunge into war with the democracies and is setting up a Nazi general staff in the Far East.

It is interesting to note that apart from the three Nazi musketeers of Stahmer, Wiedemann and Ott, two other very important German officials are now in Tokyo. One is Dr. Helmuth Wohlthat, probably Germany's ablest economic negotiator and Hitler's trusted adviser on international trade. The other is Ernest Wendler, the German Minister ousted from Bolivia in August, and now awaiting a new assignment.

A shipload of Nazi officials from South America is now on the high seas en route to the Orient, and since all routes home are blocked, they will undoubtedly be assigned to posts in the Far East.

ON ARRIVAL in Shanghai, Stahmer will find waiting for him a tremendous well-oiled organization, specializing in espionage, propaganda and smuggling of strategical materials. He will also discover that this organization is superior in resources, alertness and results to its enemy's.

The German population of Shanghai, Tientsin and other major points of the Japanese-occupied China today exceeds 4000 persons. This number is thoroughly controlled by the Nazi organization and is exclusive of the 18,000 German refugees living in shell-marked camps in the Japanese-controlled part of Shanghai.

The war has given a tremendous boost to the German community in Shanghai. It has grown in size, thanks to hundreds of well-fed, prosperous "tourists" and "businessmen" with an unmistakable military bearing who have poured into the city in the past two years. With Japanese backing, the Germans have also been able—for the first time in three decades—to get a seat on the governing council of the Foreign Settlement, a city which not so long ago was more British than Stratford-on-Avon.

The new member of the council is Herr Glathe, a prominent businessman and "Mayor" of Shanghai's "Little Berlin." His firm still does a large volume of trade with the Chinese, but he is a faithful party member and votes with his Japanese colleagues on all important issues.

THE POLITICAL BOSS of the German community is S. Lahrmann, who nominally runs the small offices of the Leipzig Fair and the German State Railways, but actually is the party leader for China. As Landes-Fuehrer (leader for a country), he ranks with the two German Charges d'Affaires.

As befits the Fuehrer's own deputy, Lahrmann is as busy as he is important. He is the official voice of the party. He decides which German is a good Nazi and which is to be ostracised. He directs the anti-Jewish activities, decides which non-German firm is to be boycotted, and for how long. He is in charge of Nazi espionage—which is separate from the spying activities carried on by the Gestapo and the diplomatic, military and naval officials. Lahrmann's signature graces all the documents pouring into the headquarters of the National Socialist Party in Berlin from China.

One of Herr Lahrmann's assistants in Herr Pflug, head of Nationalsozialistische Volkswohlfahrt (National Socialist People's Relief) and Deutsche Hilfe (German Relief.) Were Washington to devote as much attention to weeding American-registered enterprises in China of Nazi agents as it does to business firms in South America. Pflug would probably be one of the first on the proscribed list. He is the general manager and secretary of the American Drug Store, Federal Incorporated, United States of America.

IT IS INTERESTING to note that Pflug's aid in both of the German organizations is the business manager of the drug store. The office of the Nazi relief organization is on the premises of the drug store.

Investigations of the activities of German relief groups in the United States and South America has shown them to be arms of the Nazi Party. The NSV (Nazi relief) in China is no exception. Its funds are controlled by Lahrmann and his henchmen, solely to advance Nazi interests in the Orient—very often at the expense of relief of worthy by incommoded party members. As in the United States and Argentina, much of the NSV funds is reported to be used for propaganda and espionage.

The Gestapo organization in Shanghai is directed by Herr Seger, hiding beneath the convenient title of consul. An official of the German colonial office in Imperial Germany, he had embraced Nazism before Hitler's advent to power and was rewarded with several important assignments in pre-Munich secret Nazi colonial office.

His force in Shanghai alone numbers about 25 men, mostly masquerading as merchants and newspapermen. The number is constantly fluctuating, for these masters of espionage and intimidation are forever on the move, to all parts of the Japanese-occupied China. Herr Seger's office specializes in spying on nationals of Germany and the conquered European countries and in serving as an important forwarding point in the world-wide underground Nazi postal system.

Herr Seger is also entrusted with the task of keeping an eye on the 18,000 German refugees in Shanghai. A little army of agents-provocateur, their passports decorated with a huge "J"—for Jew—are living in the refugee camps and gathering information on the funds left by the refugees behind them in Germany, on their relatives still remaining in the fatherland, on the refugees' subversive plans to join the British Army.

AT ONE of the organizations caring for the German emigres in Shanghai, I was shown two years ago a short list of men known to be Nazi agents. Nothing, however, could be done against them, for the refugees live in daily fear of forfeiting their passports, without which escape from Shanghai is impossible.

The Gestapo organization works severely apart from the espionage webs maintained by the Reichswehr and the German navy. The agents of the former receive their orders from Maj. von Puttkammer. The naval spies report to one Herr Maltzahn, who—as most of the military and naval agents—masquerades as a trader, spending much of his time in travel.

It is interesting to note that the naval and military agents spend as much time spying on the Japanese Army and military potential as they do on the Allied and American war organizations and resources. The Japanese are fully aware of this—and bitterly resentful. Japanese newspapermen do not hesitate to report "off the record" the highly uncomplimentry epithets paid by the army men to German secret agents.

In a more guarded vein, a former Japanese vice minister for foreign affairs, after a recent trip to all parts of occupied China, told the press in Tokyo:

"Our glorious troops have been shedding their blood in this war for four years now, but in every part of the territory we conquered I found swarms of German merchants and very few Japanese."

The word "merchants" should have been in quotes.

Thus works one of the world's busiest Nazi nets. If Japan embarks on a new campaign in Siberia or in the South Seas—and thus becomes embroiled in a fight with the democracies—Shanghai is destined to be the chief coordinating point for German espionage, sabotage, propaganda, political activity and trade in the entire Pacific. And, sitting in the center of the Nazi web, Herr Stahmer will carry out his Fuehrer's designs for conquest and world domination.

Trap Is Set In Malaya

Aussies Are Ready

By F. Tillman Durdin
Copyright by New York Times

SINGAPORE, Oct. 17.—Any army that tries to invade the Australian sector of the Malay Peninsula will find itself up against a very tough proposition. Australians, who make up a large proportion of the Malayan defense forces, were recently assigned to a definite part of the peninsula guard. They have incorporated the latest ideas of warfare in constructing positions that will be a death trap for any force that dares to attack.

This correspondent, who has just returned from a tour of the Australian defenses, finds that the "Aussies" have turned the jungles and rubber plantations in their sector into a maze of entrenchments and bunkers, and they are still digging.

Modern conceptions of defense, in depth, have been cleverly adapted to the jungle land while coastal stretches have been hemmed with barbed wire and backed by strong positions for guns and men. The Australians do not propose to do any retreating if it comes to a fight in Malaya. Their positions will become Tobruks if the enemy ever gets ashore in the Australian sector.

MOBILITY, TOO, will characterize the Australian tactics if fighting comes. The amply mechanized Australians can shift men and equipment about with amazing swiftness. At one spot which the writer visited, practice has enabled the staff to pack up an entire brigade headquarters, including arms, motor repair establishments, and the wireless communications system, to a battle station within 30 minutes.

The Australians figure that there may be lots of jungle guerrilla warfare in Malaya and they are preparing by getting completely fit physically, as well as by acquiring an intimate knowledge of the country and about living in the jungle. Every foot of the terrain is being studied with minute carefulness.

ONE COMPANY commander showed a map of his district with every jungle trail for miles around marked in most exact detail. The map was the result of weeks of trekking through dense, swampy mosquito-infested woods by gangs of men who sometimes had to rely upon the aboriginal Sakai tribesmen to guide them in the tropical fastness

The Australians in Malay are commanded by Maj. Gen. Ache Gordon-Bennett who says that his men at present have only one major worry. They are afraid they will not get a fight in Malaya. Obviously the Australians are spoiling for action and want to come to grips with the enemy in order to get the job over with.

Move Against Racketeering

THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR at last, and reluctantly, has begun to move against racketeers and criminals of other stripe within the union movement. The elimination of George Browne, who was known to be a gangster, from one of the vice presidencies and from the national governing body, by oblique methods, is a laudable effect, but a little honesty would have improved the impression on the public. Browne was not denounced, repudiated or removed for cause. Instead, the number of vice presidencies was reduced and he was merely defeated for re-election. The press reports from the convention in Seattle reveal not one word of reproach against Browne or of apology to the country or to the rank-and-file workers on the part of high officials of the A. F. L.

PEGLER

In a sullen rear-guard resolution, for which Matt Woll, the second vice president of the A. F. L. and chairman of the resolutions committee, must take responsibility, it was held that "in vicious and misleading attacks upon the entire institution of organized labor," certain "antilabor columnists and the papers which publish their articles" harm the interests of the public as well as labor. "By such malicious and untruthful attacks," said the resolution, "they encourage antilabor forces in State Legislatures and Congress and endeavor to pass legislation which would destroy the free democratic institutions of organized labor."

That is a defensive generality which has lost its power to deceive anyone, least of all the rank-and-file members who know too well that the attacks referred to were not vicious, malicious, misleading or untruthful inventions but factual news. Not one single allegation against any individual crook has been denied, much less disproved. It was publicity which compelled the Hod-Carriers' Union to hold a few weeks ago its first convention in years, but even so that union, as badly infested with crooks as Gangster Browne's Movie Employes' racket, refused to disqualify for office thieves, racketeers and all such hideous vermin.

IT WOULD BE pertinent to ask Mr. Woll, himself, and William Green and Joseph Padway, the general counsel of the A. F. L., if they were ignorant of Browne's character. If so, they are too stupid for the offices which they hold. If not, then it was they, not any columnist or newspaper, who, by their negligence or worse, were responsible for any discredit that has come upon the union movement from these revelations. If so, it was they who encouraged "antilabor forces in State Legislatures and Congress" to advocate legislation intended to curb the powers of underworld unioneers. And in Padway's case, no plea of mere negligence can be accepted. He was general counsel for this band of racketeers and as such should have known the character and background of his clients.

Nor should the suggestion be allowed to go unchallenged that the authors of legislative bills, State and national, dealing with these problems are "antilabor forces." Undoubtedly some ignorant or bigoted legislators have offered bills which would harm the interests of labor, but the most important proposals of this kind have been designed to protect not only the rank and file from the persecutions commonly inflicted by power-drunk unioneers but to protect the whole American community. After all, unions are only private organizations and they do not deserve a privilege to attack the whole American people for the benefit of their few members. A union boss may honestly and faithfully serve the members of his union and still place himself in hostility to the whole public by whose tolerance the union is allowed to live.

CRIMINALITY is hard to prove in court when unioneers not only refuse to testify against their colleagues in crime but conspire to conceal evidence, hide witnesses and threaten public officials with political reprisals through the "union vote." Thus, crooks may still retain office in the unions merely because they lack criminal records, even though the whole A. F. L. knows them to be crooks.

However, the key-log in this jam has begun to budge and that is a hopeful sign. A year ago the A. F. L. refused to get rid of Browne and the resolution against racketeering at the 1940 convention was a disgraceful sham, which only brought discredit on the union movement.

U. S. DESTROYER KEARNY TORPEDOED YESTERDAY OFF ICELAND

Commander's Kin Had Premonition of Destroyer Disaster

By N. E. F. Meekins
Post Staff Writer

A premonition that disaster had struck the U. S. S. Kearny came in a dream to Mrs. Morah Danis, sister-in-law of Lieut. Comdr. Anthony Leo Danis, the night before the destroyer was torpedoed by a submarine off Iceland.

Lieut. Comdr. Danis is in command of the Kearny and made his home with his brother, Robert C. Danis, 1540 Forty-fourth Street Northwest, when in Washington.

"You know, Robert," Mrs. Danis said to her husband yesterday morning at breakfast, "I had the strangest dream about Anthony last night. I dreamed something had happened to the Kearny and that Anthony was hurt—he had his hand bandaged."

Her husband, a War Department architect at Fort Myer, Va., sipped his coffee and said:

"That's silly! Just forget it—nothing has happened to my brother. Besides, the Kearny is one of the finest ships in the fleet."

Danis went to his office at Fort Myer, having forgotten about his wife's dream. Then at about 10 a. m., his phone rang with news that the Kearny had been torpedoed.

"Well, you can understand how I felt after that," Danis said. "The only reason I can give for my wife having such a dream is that we have been talking and thinking a great deal about my brother lately, knowing he was on patrol duty up there."

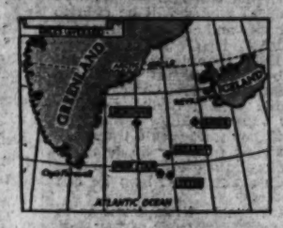
Lieut. Comdr. Danis has been "lucky" in previous accidents, according to his brother. His transfer from sea duty on the ill-fated dirigible Shenandoah was delayed, keeping him off the ship at the time of its crash in 1925.

In 1931 he was assigned to the Akron but was transferred from the airship just 30 days before she crashed off Barnegat Lightship.

When the huge airship Macon was commissioned in 1933, he was assigned to her as aerological officer and was aboard when the ship crashed in the Pacific Ocean off Point Sur February 12, 1935. He suffered injuries of his legs, hands and back.

Lieut. Comdr. Danis, a native of Woonsocket, R. I., was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1922. He attended Dowd's Academy here and later returned to Annapolis on a tour of duty. He also completed graduate courses in aerology at Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is 42 years old and is married. His wife, Verna, and 12-year-old son, Anthony, jr., are in New York. His father, Alfred, and another brother, Norman F. Danis, live on Conduit Road, Md. The elder Danis did not know his son's ship had been torpedoed until told of it by The Post yesterday afternoon.

Among the enlisted men aboard the Kearny are Vincent M. Young, 2121 Fifteenth Street Southeast, and Thomas W. Worrel 1404 Flower Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.



In the North Atlantic between Greenland and Iceland, the Montana, former Danish ship operated by the Maritime Commission, was torpedoed and sunk September 11; the Pink Star, under Panamanian registry, was sunk September 19; the Sessa was sunk by torpedo August 17; United States destroyer Greer was fired on by submarine September 4; yesterday the U. S. S. Kearny was torpedoed

Kearny's Officers Listed by Navy

Carolina Moon Shines on 29th—Troops Present a Warlike Picture

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Moonlight flooded the crossroads in South Carolina, making ghostly the struggling lines of trucks and guns. It was a hard, merciless moonlight, entirely fitting to the warlike picture it revealed to airplanes droning above the crossroads.

Worried officers strove to untangle their own companies and batteries from the confused stream that moved upon the crossroads in dwindling columns of pale blue blackout lights. The commanding general himself came down to help untangle the confusion and get his division into line.

Across the way another general stood at a crossroads in North Carolina where the same white moonlight bathed two lines of trucks converging, mingling, parting again.

On both sides infantry got down from its trucks and marched, Blue toward the south and Red toward the north, each seeking out the other with touchy patrols. Infantry lines were formed and the guns were wheeled into place and red lights blossomed on their aiming stakes.

Men felt rather than saw, under their fighting gear they stumbled across the cotton rows and found resting places in cornfield ditches to wait for dawn and battle. Patrols made captures, cavalry struck far behind the lines. Nowhere could anything be pieced together into any pattern a man could follow.

That is the way armies must move into battle today. The same moon that looked down upon these men playing at war looks down in Europe on many crowded crossroads, where iron death preys on men for whom war is real.

All the world is acrawl with armies marching by night.

Right Use of Cosmetics Aids Thrift and Looks

Pointers Given for Meeting Wartime Make-up Problems

By Carolyn Abbott

WITH inflation in the offing, taxes increasing steadily and the prospect of a cosmetic shortage in the not too distant future, it behooves all of us to conserve our beauty preparations.

Most of us are extravagant and wasteful with creams, powder, lipstick, perfume and facial tissues. Usually more creams lubricate pillows than faces. Often more powder covers the dressing table or floor than face. Yet, waste can be reduced to a minimum by exercising a little care.

First, consider face powder. Should it be bought in large quantities? No, for powder loses its perfume and strength after it has been opened. If you buy a large box, put just a little in a small container. In this way you won't be inclined to waste as much. A small metal container that releases by a push of the button—enough powder for one using is one way of saving it. Powder puffs and brushes require more powder than a piece of fluffy cotton. With a brush you whisk much of the powder away, therefore, need to apply a larger amount. Much of the powder is absorbed by a thick powder puff—so try cotton instead. By stirring and whipping the powder it will last longer and go farther. The reason—when packaged, the powder is packed so compactly that the grains cling together. When you dip your puff into the box, you pick up a double amount. Stirring separates the particles and makes the powder lighter. Powder well the first time so you won't have to keep dabbing and adding.

Economize on lipstick by applying it carefully with a good brush

Divide the Cream

Face creams may be bought in large quantities for they do not deteriorate. However, if you have a big jar of cream, you are prone to smear it on lavishly. Just as matter of economy as well as psychology, divide the cream, putting a small amount in a little jar. This will curb too much waste.

Also, use less cream and pat more. It's what you do with the cream—not how much you use—that counts. If you will apply night and nouris ing cream lightly, and pat with a patter designed for that purpose, you will use one-eighth of your usual amount. The patter will more than pay for itself in a few months. Budget your cream and stick to it.

Also, take advantage of special sales. You can save almost half and get just as much for your money. For example, this week a local store will give you a $1 jar of eye cream with the purchase of $1 worth of a cosmetics of a certain brand.

Another cosmetic firm has a yearly sale on two of it's creams—a softening cream and a special formula emollient cream. Even with the ten per cent additional tax you get them this week for less than half price.

Apply After Washing

Apply hand lotion immediately after washing hands. The warmth of the hands not only makes the cream more effective but requires less.

You can make your skin tonic go twice as far, if you will first moisten the cotton with cold or ice water.

Facial tissues usually come doubled or tripled. Separate the tissues before using—it's more thrifty and equally as efficient as using them doubled.

An atomizer will conserve your perfume (an increasingly expensive item) only if you keep it out of sight of your friends. Usually, the first thing they do when they see an atomizer on a dressing table is to start spraying. Be sure to get a leak and evaporation-proof atomizer. Exposed to air, perfume evaporates rapidly. But if you can't say "No" to all your friends, who want to sample your perfume on sight, keep it in a bottle and apply sparingly with an eye dropper.

Use a Dropper

You can stretch your eye tonic double, if you will apply it with an eye dropper. With a cup, you waste more than you use. Also, you can safely dilute eye tonic with a little warm water.

Lipstick is one of the most expensive items, for it disappears more quickly than any other beauty preparation. However, you can reduce the amount spent on lipstick, if you will get refills instead of a new container. Containers—which may be difficult to obtain and will probably raise price of lipstick—are the most costly part of lipsticks. Be sure to screw the lipstick to bottom of holder so it won't break off when you put the cap or top on. Once the lipstick is broken you waste more than half of it. Apply lipstick with a brush—it takes less, requires less blotting and you can use it down to the last bit in the tube.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Solicits Advice on Behalf of Daughter, Who Loses Beaux by Her Seeming Indifference; Also, Asks What Cravat Man Wears With Cutaway

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Just now, my daughter is away in college. Last year she made the acquaintance of a fine young man. After she had gone with him to several school affairs, she heard he was engaged. However, he explained that it wasn't really an engagement, as he had years of schooling ahead;—and a few months ago, he wrote to her to say that the romance was definitely off. He asked if he might call on my daughter when he got back to his school, near here.

She replied that he could and then, one weekend when she was away, he made a trip to her college town. He called at her boarding house and chatted with her "house mother," but left no message of any kind. Neither has he written her since. She values his friendship; but hasn't known what move to make, if any. That was several weeks ago. She wonders now if she should write him a note, saying she was sorry she missed him. She goes out with several young men at her college, and he may have heard this, and thinks she isn't particularly interested in him. However, she really prized his attentions. So what should she do?

For two or three years before she met Tom, she had been going about some with another boy, during vacations. Ben is four years her senior and when she first met him she was quite young. She considered him very grown-up and wonderful; but through the years she heard rumors of his prowess with girls, and how a girl couldn't afford to believe anything he said, because he made each girl think she was "the one and only."

As a result, when he began giving her a real rush last fall, she laughed at his protestations of love—not because she wanted to, for by that time she idolized him; but because she thought it the wise thing to do. Finally, she was hurt by her attitude; at least, his pride was. He stopped coming to see her, and she has been heartbroken about it. She can think of no way of letting him know how she felt then and feels now. She holds herself to blame for the rift, which, of course, adds to her suffering.

After several months' coolness, they smile now when they meet; but that is all. She goes out with other boys, in an effort to forget. She says she will know better, in future, than to be influenced by gossip; and that she will take men's compliments at face value, running the risk of being "let down" later, rather than be personally responsible for a misunderstanding. I would like to tell her to forget him; that the pain will pass. But do you think the misunderstanding could be healed?

Now, for questions of a different sort: My husband is a minister, frequently required to officiate at weddings. In our church it is customary for the minister to wear a cutaway coat and striped trousers for morning and afternoon weddings; and the same type coat with matching trousers for evening weddings. But what tie should be worn? Those worn by the bridegroom and ushers vary. Sometimes it's white tie and other times black tie. Should the minister wear a four-in-hand or bow tie? And should he wear one color for day and another for night? Your opinions will be appreciated.

BETTINA.

Maternal Supervision Often Blights Romance

DEAR BETTINA: Since your daughter felt badly about missing Tom's unannounced visit, she should have written him to that effect, within the week after he had called. The only justification for ignoring the incident would have been complete indifference to his comings-and-goings. Since she played her real feelings false by saying nothing, I suppose Tom infers that she is no longer interested in him. And who knows what her "house mother" told him—of her string of beaux at college? He may have slunk away—after having come to "surprise" her, on the theory that he was First Man in her thoughts—smarting under the humiliating conclusion that she was a case-hardened flirt, who had been playing him for a sucker.

It occurs to me that your daughter's romances may be wilting as a result of too much maternal supervision, however well meant. Whether or not she has solicited your counsel, your worried absorption with her heart problem tends toward the "fussy interference" side,—a maternal attitude that almost invariably blights young love. Perhaps you have tried to coach her in the same brand of "hard-to-get" coquetry that seemed to work best for girls of your generation,—instead of letting her alone to be simply her warm hearted self in dealing with her best-liked beaux.

She lost the friendship of her idolized suitor Ben by mocking his court, and while she is determined never to repeat that identical mistake, she ought to realize that by ignoring Tom's call (which he had led up to, by correspondence), she is giving him comparable cause to feel vaguely aggrieved and affronted—supposing he cares for her a little. If he cared a great deal, he might have pursued the matter. The fact that he lets it rest, leaving the next move to her, suggests that he cares enough to have his feelings hurt; but not enough to run after her. Enough, in brief, to be a devoted friend, provided she is willing to meet him halfway.

And that, I think, is what she should try to do,—by writing to ask what's become of him, and saying how sorry she was to have missed him that weekend, and is there any chance that he may be coming that way soon again. Incidentally, I think she ought, also, to begin trying to manage her sentimental relationships without continuous reference to your analytical opinion, and with diminishing dependence upon your guidance.

Now, about the correct cravat for your husband: Emily Post, writing in Etiquette: The Blue Book of Social Usage, reports that "most modern clergymen choose the cutaway coat in preference to the frock coat . . . and in the evening many clergymen wear the same clothes exactly that they wear in the daytime." She says, further, that "a cutaway coat is accompanied by a black, or black-and-white or grey bow tie; or by a black-and-white four-in-hand." So take your choice. My personal vote would favor, for a churchman, a striped four-in-hand for daytime, and a black four-in-hand for evening. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post Women's Page.

Chic for Babies

WHAT the well dressed baby will wear this fall is a question in the minds of many an expectant mother. One mother-to-be writes that she would like to know what should be included in the simplest type of layette.

After scanning the infant department of a local store, the fashion editor finds that these items are considered essential for the baby:

CLOTHING—Four cotton shirts, four cotton knit gowns, three to six dozen cotton gauze diapers, three cotton knit wrappers, one waterproof diaper cover, six dresses, three gertrudes (petticoats), two sacques (jackets), (the sacques, booties and bonnets may be bought in cunning matching sets instead of separately), two pairs of booties, two bonnets, one bunting (zipper bag with hood), one wool wrapper (instead of a coat), two bibs and one shawl.

BATH NEEDS—Two cotton knit wash cloths, two cotton knit body towels and one cotton knit bath towel.

There are also a number of accessories that go with the crib, such as a cotton felt mattress, and sheets (rubber and muslin). Scales and a bathinette are optional. Also included among the notions—depending upon whether or not the infant is a bottle baby—are bottles, caps, nipples, soap, oil, safety pins and cotton. For convenience, there are also other items not mentioned.

Dateless Wrap

FROM a business woman who has few occasions for wearing evening dress comes a query about wraps. She wants to know what style to buy so that the wrap may be worn several years without appearing dated, and also be appropriate most of the year.

For formal evening year, the buyer of a local store suggests one of the soft wool fitted wraps in a conservative style that is practically dateless. Those mentioned have slightly flared skirts, with soft, turned-back collars, or no collars at all. The fabric is a hairy type cloth that is good both summer and winter. Although the coat comes in black, red, natural and gold, the natural shade is advised as being the wisest choice. For summer the same wrap is shown without an inner lining.

The Jacket Type

A WOMAN who is 5 feet 3 inches tall wants to know if she is too short to wear the jacket dress. Although it is becoming so popular, she thinks perhaps it might not appear well on her.

Theoretically the jacket dress is poor style for a short woman to wear because in all her clothes she should strive for a longer line. Often a jacket dress has a tendency to cut the shorter person in two. If, however, the proper length jacket is chosen, it will not appear unbecoming. The bolero type jacket is supposed to be the ideal length to choose and waist-length is the absolute deadline for it. The so-called long torso jacket is completely out.

In the case of the average or tall woman—the story is a different one. Either type can wear the jacket dress to perfection, provided, of course, the figure is a fairly slim one. Since stylists say the tall woman can wear the so-called long-torso jackets, neither she nor the average woman needs to watch jacket lengths as closely as the short woman. The jacket should always reach just below waist length for the average figure, and may be a little longer for the taller one—never shorter.

Dress Tricks, as Well as Diets, Aid the Stout; Modern Fitters Disguise 'Spare Tires,' Big Hips

It's Less Expensive, However, to Cut Down on Calories

By Ida Jean Kain

BY THE TIME a woman can afford the kind of clothes she has always dreamed of, she is in the stylish stout class and can't wear them! That observation flitted through my mind the other day as I watched a fashion showing at which all the prospective shoppers seemed to be crowding size 40s, while the models were quite at ease in 12s.

The conversation that went on about me was food for this column. One grand dame, on the pouter pigeon order, beckoned with her lorgnette to a slinky young number and said: "Now that's very smart. That makes you look very slim." Then she added wistfully, "But I suppose you are!"

Customers' Remarks

Some of the choice remarks from customer to model were along this line—

"I'll bet you never eat a potato!"

"What kind of girdle do you wear?"

"Now, that's what I had in mind—I want to look just like that."

Fortunately, the fitters are modern magicians at slenderizing those who have passed the plump stage. For the figure with the large bosom, the fitter advises that the under-garment be snug but that the dress be loose across this area. Sometimes clips are placed high on the neckline to divert attention. A similar effect can be achieved with shoulder detail.

A slight extension of the shoulder line will give the illusion of slimness through the hips. To avoid any suggestion of the football silhouette, this may be accomplished by the use of soft pleating in the material rather than too much padding. The shoulders should be broad, but the line, itself should be kept soft.

When the front line is not quite as flat as it once was, soft folds over the stomach with disguise the fault. Material over this measurement should never be drawn tight.

Hips can best be subdued with the skirt that is gored in front and has shirring in the back. A peplum of exactly the right fullness and length is also effective.

The idea in shopping—so the stylists say—is to exercise restraint in the choice of clothes. And in the fitting—so the experts say—to have the material loose across the large portion. And if you ask your dietitian, count your calories—it's less expensive all around.

A style help for the woman with a large bosom is a clip placed high on the neckline (as above) to serve as an attention diverter. Shoulder detail in a dress also helps

Parties on Grand Scale To Greet Latin Visitors

Dozen Argentine Diplomats and Wives To Arrive Monday; Will Sail for Home Nov. 8

By Carolyn Bell

Partying with a "Souz Amer-rican" flavor will be done on a titanic scale next week with the arrival of a dozen Argentine deputies and their wives on Monday. Delegations galore have descended on the city in the past—but seldom have they been quite so frantically entertained. A schedule that would stagger [no pun intended] most people (but we'll wager the Latins take it in their stride) has been mapped out for them from the time they step down from one gangplank until, on November 8, they step up another—to sail homeward.

Monday will be highlighted by a gala given at the Pan American Building by House Speaker Sam Rayburn who first extended the invitation to the President of the Chamber of Deputies of the Argentine, Don Jose Luis Cantilo and the other members to visit this country. Cantilo, incidentally, is one of the Argentine's most eminent statesmen and a member of the "radical" party—the radical being a misnomer, as it is the middle-of-the-road group in the republic. He was formerly Governor of Buenos Aires and once Mayor of B. A.—a tremendously important job politically.

They will be met in New York by the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil, as well as a number of Congressmen and officials of the State Department. They will go by cutter to Jersey City and there entrain for Washington to be met again by another reception committee.

Mrs. Cordell Hull To Give Luncheon

"He is a man to watch—for he will go far" is the opinion of a diplomat speaking of Don Americo Ghioldi, a socialist member of the Chamber, who with his wife, Senora de Ghioldi, will be in the group. Another interesting gentleman is Raul Damonte Tabora, "the 'Martin Dies' of the Argentine." A rabid anti-Nazi politician, he is married to the daughter of the owner of "Critica" one of the most pro-Allies papers in South America.

But to return to their program: Tuesday morning will be spent sightseeing, and Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, will fete the women at a luncheon at the Carlton. Meanwhile Speaker Rayburn will be host to the men at a luncheon at the Capitol. More sightseeing will follow and that evening they will attend the Philadelphia Orchestra's concert at Constitution Hall.

Two important parties are on their calendar Wednesday when the Vice President, Henry A. Wallace, will tender a luncheon in honor of the deputies at the Carlton and the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles will be hosts at a brilliant dinner that evening at the Mayflower.

Argentine Embassy Reception Scheduled

The handsome Argentine Embassy on New Hampshire Avenue will be the scene of a gala event on Thursday evening honoring Senor and Senora de Cantilo, the deputies and their ladies. Earlier—between 5:30 and 7:30—Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller will be hosts at a reception for them at their home on Foxhall Road. In the morning they will visit Annapolis and will be feted at a luncheon to be given by the Superintendent of the Naval Academy.

Leaving Friday, the party will go to Williamsburg, Va., where they will spend three days as guests of Colonial Williamsburg Corp., seeing the town that has been so beautifully restored to the Colonial era.

They will then be whisked off Monday, October 27, to Detroit and points north where various industrial plants and factories will be explored. In Philadelphia on October 31 and November 1 they will not only see the Liberty Bell, etc., but will attend the University of Pennsylvania-Navy football game. After a week in New York they will sail aboard the steamship Uruguay for home.

Among those, not already mentioned, on the party are Senor Don Armando G. Antille and Senora de Antille; Senor Don Juan I. Cooke and Senora de Cooke; Senor Don Nicanor Costa Mendez and Senora de Costa Mendez; Senor Don Alejandro Gancedo and Senora de Gancedo; Senor Don Adolfo Lanus and Senora de Lanus; Senor Don Fernando de Prat Gay and Senora de Prat Gay, Senor Don Juan Simon Padtros and Senor Don Americo Pretti, secretary of the delegation, and Senora de Pretti.

Third Suspect Arrested in Miley Killings

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 17 (AP).—Raymond S. (Skeeter) Baxter, 27-year-old golf club greens tender, was arrested on a murder charge today as a third suspect in the robbery-slaying of golf star Marion Miley and her mother. Police reported the finding of two guns used in the killings.

Meanwhile, the Fayette grand jury indicted Thomas C. Penney, 32, former Lexington carpenter, and Robert H. Anderson, 36, Louisville night club owner, for murder. Anderson's trial were set for October 27.

Baxter was implicated in the crime, Police Chief Austin B. Price said, by Penney, who admitted his own participation following his arrest last week at Fort Worth, Tex. Previously tight-lipped on reports that an "inside man" helped the slayers enter the clubhouse, the police chief declined to elabo-ate on Baxter's part.

'Phantom' Burglar Suspect Hangs Self

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 17 (AP).—Frank Henson, 45-year-old Baltimore, Md., Negro, identified by Superintendent of Police Charles A. Wheeler, as the "phantom pants burglar," who had terrorized the north end of this city, was found hanging today in a cell at the county jail. Medical Examiner H. R. Delucca said Henson had committed suicide.

Capt. James H. Bray, of the Bridgeport Police, said the prisoner, later charged with burglary, had admitted jumping an $8000 bail bond in Baltimore, where he was wanted on charges of breaking and entering.

Capt. John Cooney, of the Baltimore Police, had described Henson as "the slickest house burglar I have ever known," and warned authorities here to keep a "sharp watch" on him.

Cox Slaying Case Shocks Trailer Folk

Alexandria Camp Dwellers Describe Confessed Killer As Model Youth

Occupants of a congested Alexandria trailer camp, were generally shocked yesterday on receipt of reports that Herbert H. Cox, jr., 16, had admitted shooting and killing G. G. Browning, 38-year-old carpenter, "because he wanted to take Browning's car" and continue a journey on which the pair had embarked with two high school girls a few hours earlier.

Acquaintances of young Cox and the two girls, Leona Cunningham, 14, and Ida Mae Price, 15, still were inclined to believe the lad's earlier confession that he had shot Browning because he had made advances toward one of the girls when they parked near Bel Air, Md., after having left the trailer camp late Sunday night.

Young Cox apparently was not well known by residents of the camp, but those whom had his acquaintance since he arrived from Florida with his family several months ago, described him as a quiet, well-behaved youngster who "did just what he was told and minded his own business." Generally, they seemed incredulous that he could be capable of any such violence as is indicated in his latest confession as reported by Portland, Me., authorities.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Cox, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Cunningham and Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Price, parents of the three youngsters, who persuaded Browning to take them to Baltimore to start them on their northward trip, all expressed belief that Herbert had shot to defend the honor of one of the girls, despite his reported repudiation of his first version of the slaying.

"I can't believe he would have done it without justification," said Mrs. Price. "When we knew the girls had run away and then learned that Herbert was with them we were so relieved, for we felt that he would protect them if it was necessary."

Gerald Ray, a sheet metal worker employed at the National Airport, who introduced young Cox and the two girls to Browning, described the youth as a "nice kid," and seemed to be "a type of boy who would shoot someone only if it was justified."

Ray said he had asked Browning to take the trio as far as Washington because he knew they were planning to leave the camp, and "wanted to help them out."

Ray said he had known Browning well since he came to the trailer camp three weeks ago. "He seemed to be a mighty nice fellow, and I didn't think he'd make any effort to harm the kids," he added.

The boy's earlier statement that Browning had made advances toward one of the two girls after parking his auto near the Maryland-Delaware border was accepted as doubtful by two carpenters with whom the victim shared a trailer at the camp. Ivery House and S. R. Green, who had roomed with Browning at Camp Lee, Va., before the trio came to Alexandria to accept jobs on a defense construction project, said he "wasn't the type to be making passes at high school girls."

House said Browning was a very quiet man, of moderate habits "who never bothered anyone."

The trailer camp in which Browning, young Cox and the two girls lived is situated off Route 1, a short distance north of Alexandria's business section, and is composed almost entirely of families of workers who have come to Alexandria to obtain employment on defense and construction projects. About 45 trailers, representing nearly as many States, are encamped there.

Coroner Makes Report

Darlington, Md., Oct. 17 (AP).—A single bullet fired into the back of his head killed Grainger G. Browning, Dr. James W. Ramsey, Harford County deputy medical examiner, said after an autopsy today.

Meanwhile, Sheriff Walter Bennington, of Harford County; his wife and State Patrolman Leander H. Thomas left for Portland, Me., to bring back three 'teen-age youngsters charged in warrants with the slaying. The three will stand trial in Harford County, Sheriff Bennington said. He said he expected to return Sunday night or Monday.

Physician Testifies Against Gedney

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Oct. 17 (AP).—Dr. Jose Ferrer, physician, called by the prosecution in the trial of Ralph Gedney, Washington, D. C., engineer, charged with murdering his wife, Virginia, testified in Federal Court today that no fall could have caused some of the injuries to the dead woman.

At the end of the fourth day of the trial the court refused to strike Dr. Ferrer's testimony from the record as requested by the defense.

Airport Strike Settlement Near

Negotiations were still going on last night in an effort to settle the strike that has held up grading work at the new Washington National Airport and Bolling Field.

J. G. Loeffler, jr., of the Tufano Contracting Co., said settlement of the dispute over alleged hiring of nonunion labor, was expected today.

The strike was called Tuesday. Approximately 80 laborers, engineers and truck drivers are involved, tying up grading projects totaling $750,000.

Windsors Spend Quiet Day Here; Duke Visits CCC Units

BOWLAZOOP—Cook lifts the cover and the Duke of Windsor gets a whiff from the soup pot at the Rock Creek Park CCC Camp

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor were enjoying Virginia hospitality last night after a day of sightseeing in Washington during which they quietly visited historic landmarks and the duke inspected two CCC camps.

They will spend the weekend at Oakwood, the estate of Capt. and Mrs. Sterling Larrabee near Warrenton, before going to New York.

In the Capital yesterday the royal couple were the luncheon guests of Lord Halifax at the British Embassy. Later they visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., at 2110 LeRoy Place Northwest, and in company with Mr. Robert the duke made a pilgrimage to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and to the Lee Mansion in Arlington.

Visits CCC Camps

Before going to the embassy at noon, the duke saw CCC camps at Beltsville, Md., and in Rock Creek Park. Escorted by James McEntee, CCC director, the duke expressed admiration for the project as he inspected sleeping quarters, mess halls, recreation rooms and talked to many boys and asked questions of a dozen officers.

"It's a pity they didn't start something like this in England, instead of the dole," he said. The duke, whose enthusiasm for the tour was evidenced by the way he led the official party through building after building, has expressed his desire to establish an organization similar to the CCC in the Bahamas, where he is governor.

Arriving at the Rock Creek camp about 11:30 a. m. he passed down the lines of green uniformed youths lined up stiffly for his inspection. He stopped to ask several if they had ever worked before.

Praises Commander

To Dan Bandish, 19, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., he said, "Have you put on weight?" When Lieut. Hugo Ruggerio, commander of the camp, told him that Bandish had gained 12 pounds in a few short months and was a boxing champion at the camp, the duke said: "You've done much for him."

In the camp's recreation building, Charles Washburn, 19, a CCC enrollee who recently won a scholarship to the Corcoran Art School, presented the duke with an excellent crayon drawing of the Windsor profile. "I'll have to take this home to the duchess," Windsor said.

He signed "Edward" in a rapid scrawl on another drawing of himself and shook hands with the young artist.

Samuel Keenan, a World War veteran and mess sergeant for the camp, was questioned for five minutes on the menu for the evening meal while the duke lifted the lids off steaming kettles. "They feed toast to sailors in the British navy now for breakfast," he said. "When I was growing up in the navy they gave us stale bread."

Windsor's supply of questions was endless. "Do they wash their own clothes?" "What vacation do they get?" "Are they served hot meals in the field?" To each answer he nodded his head and frowned thoughtfully.

Earlier in the morning the party visited one of three Negro camps at Beltsville on the grounds of the Research Center of the Department of Agriculture.

On the road leading from the Research Center, the duke stopped his car and talked to some Negro workmen digging a roadside ditch. "Which is the hardest part to dig?" he asked. "The top," one man said. "It's best to get that over with first," the duke said dryly.

The duchess was not with him at the camps. She motored to Washington from Baltimore with Maj. Grey Phillips, the duke's aide. They met at the British Embassy for lunch.

Unable to Attend

A group of Congress members, including Rep. Sol Bloom, Democrat of New York, waited in vain for a tea for the Duke and Duchess in the Capitol rotunda. Mrs. Mabel Anderson, who had expected the couple to visit a Red Cross booth there, finally gave flowers intended for the Duchess to tourists and poured out the tea.

"I'm so sorry," she said. "We worked as hard as we could to get things ready."

She said an aide to the Duke had notified her that the Windsors would come. Later, however the British Embassy sent word the Duke and Duchess were unable to attend.

At "Oakwood" it was said the couple would be visited today and tomorrow by some of the Duchess' intimate friends in the northern Virginia area.

Citizens, Vets Draft Civilian Defense Plan

Twelve representatives of three Northeast citizens' associations and two veterans' posts last night drew up preliminary recommendations for organizing their section of the city for civilian defense. The proposals will be made at a community mass meeting October 25 in Taft Junior High School.

Meeting in the office of John L. Fowler, president of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, the men voted to recommend the appointment of one deputy warden for the greater North Woodridge area and three assistant deputies for each area covered by the Rhode Island Avenue, the National Gateway and the Burroughs Citizens Associations.

They also agreed to propose that a civilian defense committee of five members be elected. In addition to the citizens' associations, Bunker Hill Post, American Legion, and Follow Me Defense Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, were represented at the meeting.

'Lost' Boy, 4, Plays and Dines; Police Search, Parents Worry

TIMOTHY COFFEY

For more than 9 hours yesterday his parents, his sisters, the United States Park Police, a corps of CCC boys and a troop of Boy Scouts could not find 4-year-old Timothy Coffey, of 3540 Hertford Place Northwest.

Meanwhile, young Coffey after wandering 35 blocks, played soldiers with the Foley boys, of 5525 Kansas Avenue Northwest, ate a big supper and listened to "The Lone Ranger" on the radio.

None of the three Foley boys knew their little guest. They just took him in, until the father, Paul Foley, assistant secretary to the District Commission on Licensure, began imagining the anxious state of the lad's family. After supper he walked Timothy around the block. None of the neighbors knew him. So Sixth Precinct police were notified.

A police broadcast about 8 p. m. telling about a missing boy with brown hair, blue eyes and blue denim overalls was the tip-off.

E. P. Coffey, a Government clerk, was invited to come over to the Foleys and pick up his son. He did so quickly.

House Group Scans Draft Of Rent Bill

Early Favorable Report Is Expected On Washington Ceiling Measure

Agreed on the principle of an emergency rent control measure for Washington, the House District Committee is expected to iron out administrative questions of the proposed act Monday.

The committee yesterday considered in executive session a tentative bill which would give a proposed rent administrator wide discretionary powers in the control of rent rates in the District. It was understood to have met with the committee's approval with the exception of five points which Chairman Randolph listed as follows:

1. Whether President Roosevelt or the District Commissioners should appoint the rent administrator.

Date of Freezing

2. Whether rents should be frozen at the September, 1940, date favored by local real estate interests, or at the September, 1941, date recommended by the Office of Price Administration.

3. Whether the administrator would have the power to require licenses of all District landlords.

4. When the rent control will be terminated. The Government agency would have the President proclaim the end of the emergency, and the real estate groups would set a definite date.

5. Whether the administrator should require reports of landlords and agencies giving data on expenses, tenants and other facts.

Meeting Monday

Chairman Randolph declared after the executive session that he did not doubt but what the committee would report out a rent control bill. The matter will be taken up at the full committee meeting Monday at 10 a. m., he said.

The tentative draft of the bill is in many aspects a compromise of two diverse types of bills recommended over the course of hearings by the National Defense Subcommittee.

Although the draft provides that rents be frozen at a date agreed upon, it would give the administrator the authority to adjust rents upward or downward if he determined changes in tax rates justified it.

Under the proposed act in its present form, a landlord would have these rights:

To petition the administrator for a higher rent rate on the basis of increased taxes.

To Reduce Service

To petition for permission to reduce the service he supplies if the move were made in good faith and with valid business reasons.

To recover possession of rented property for his personal use, or sell it or remodel as he chooses.

These rights are given the tenant:

To seek a lower rent on the basis of discontinuance of services normally supplied.

To be precluded from the danger of eviction on the grounds that he does not have a lease provided he continues to pay "the rent to which the landloard is entitled."

Public School Group Debates Salute Issue

The Board of Education was attacked and defended at a meeting of the District of Columbia Public School Association last night for abolishing the Nazi-like salute to the flag by Washington school children.

"The original salute for nonmilitary organizations (arm extended, palm up) should not be changed rimply because it may suggest another form of salute," declared George F. Wohlgemuth, chairman of the Americanism Commission of the American Legion's District Department."

He said the military salute adopted by the Board of Education in its stead, "if performed properly, would require regimented instruction, which is exactly opposite to our desired way of living."

Mrs. Eleanor Austin, executive secretary of the United States Flag Association, asked: "Why should we, of the United States, change our method of salute, which was well established before Nazlism and Fascism were known to the world?" Anyhow, she said, the American and Nazi salutes are "not the same, nor are they particularly similar."

The board was defended by Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools, who said "the approval of this salutation by the Congress of Parents and Teachers of the District of Columbia indicates that our parents are favorable generally to the action of the board."

Cellars, Attics Yield Tons Of Scrap Metal

Washington's Federal establishments looked into some of their own basements and attics yesterday and disgorged more than 26,000 pounds of heavy materials to be fired if defense requires.

Acting under Charles A. Peters, buildings manager in the Public Buildings Administration, the scrap iron searchers made their biggest haul at the Central Heating Plant, where 20,000 pounds of stoker bars—implements having to be replaced—were obtained.

Budapest Group Scores At Concert

By Ray C. B. Brown

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Budapest String Quartet (Josef Roismann, Alexander Schneider, Boris Kroyt and Mischa Schneider) on Friday night in Coolidge Auditorium. Program: Quartet in B flat major, K. V. 589 (Mozart), Quartet Movement in C minor (Schubert), Andante and Scherzo, Op. 81 (Mendelssohn), Quartet in E flat major, Op. 109 (Reger).

Currently engaged in weekly broadcasts of Beethoven from the Whittall Pavillion in the Library of Congress, the Budapest String Quartet appeared last evening in a public concert donated by the Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation. Coolidge Auditorium was filled to capacity by an audience which greeted the admirable foursome with most cordial demonstrations. The program will be repeated this afternoon.

BROWN

From the Mozart shelf came the B flat major quartet, one of the three written for King Friedrich Wilhelm II of Prussia as a result of the composer's otherwise unprofitable visit to Berlin in 1789. Some critics regard this set of quartets as mere courtly music designed to please the royal patron, but there are good grounds for believing that they contain indications of new directions in Mozart's thought. The B flat quartet is distinguished by a minuet not only exceptionally long but also remarkable for the unusual treatment of that dance form.

Schubert was represented by the quartet movement in C minor which by some wonder escaped being nicknamed. In the days when it was customary to attach descriptive labels to abstract music, it is strange that no one called it "The Hive" or "The Bees" because of the recurrent buzzing passage. This work was paired with Mendelssohn's infrequently played Opus 81, consisting of an andante theme charmingly embroidered with variations, and a dancing scherzo from which Arthur Sullivan may well have borrowed some ideas for the Gilbert operettas.

Max Reger's quartet in E flat major was the peak of the program. Those who are wont to dismiss Reger with a shrug as an academic and ponderous composer should listen to more of his music with sharp attention. This quartet not only is masterly in construction and rich in texture because of double stopping, but it is also deeply satisfying in its thematic content.

The first movement, with a lyric and Brahms-like theme, is packed with poesy. The following scherzo is animated by fantasy and humor. In the larghetto one hears a contemplative song beautiful in its intonation, and the allegro finale in the larghetto one hears a contheme unmistakably folkish in character.

Pass 'Fire Escape' Bill, House Urged

Favorable action on the District "fire escape" bill was urged yesterday in a report to the House from the District Committee.

The measure authorizes the Commissioners to set up fire safety regulations for dwellings with sleeping quarters for more than 10 persons above the first floor. It requires that a public hearing precede promulgation of regulations.

500 Drive Workers Hear Former Budget Chief at Luncheon

"The Community Chest is a living symbol of the people's regard for this thing we call freedom."

Five hundred men and women who will try to put Washington's 1941 Chest campaign over the top next month heard those words yesterday from Lewis W. Douglas, former Arizona Congressman and Budget Bureau director.

Addressing the Community Chest League keynote luncheon at the Hotel Mayflower, Douglas emphasized that man's protection of his fellow man will prove a vital factor in protecting this country from the fate that has befallen most of Europe.

"Freedom and responsibility are irrevocably and eternally linked together," Douglas, president of a New York life insurance company, told the gathering of civic leaders.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, chairman of the Community Chest League and vice chairman of the National Mobilization Committee for Human Needs. The Very Rev. Arthur J. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, and other guests were welcomed by Mrs. Rudolph Max Kauffmann, chairman of the luncheon executive committee.

Following the address by Douglas, the Community Chest campaign picture, "For Freedom," was screned. Filmed in color and with running narration, it depicts activities of charitable endeavors which draw support from the Chest.

The 1941 drive will open November 13 and continue through November 27.

Roll Call Still 80,000 Short

The District Red Cross Roll Call neared the end of its four-week drive last night still more than 80,000 members short of its 200,000 membership goal. Total enrollments with approximately 15,000 volunteer workers engaged in Roll Call, were 118,989.

Edgar Morris, Roll Call Chairman, expressing concern over the small enrollment, urged that all workers make particular effort to get their reports to headquarters today to lessen the anticipated deluge of reports on Monday, when the Roll Call officially comes to an end.

Boy, 3, Killed Trying to Steal Ride on Truck

A heavy truck loaded with firewood ran over a 3-year-old child here at 4:45 p. m. yesterday, causing the year's seventy-first traffic death in Washington.

The child was John McAuliffe, 1653 Thirty-fourth Street Northwest. With other children of the Georgetown neighborhood, he was at play in an alley, leading into Dent Place Northwest, in the rear of John's home, when the truck appeared.

Two taxicab drivers, George W. Golden and Walter Simmons, both of 3330 Dent Place Northwest, carried the boy to Georgetown Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival by Dr. Frank Whitesell.

Police said the driver of the truck was Dorsey Lee Hungerford, 18, of Germantown, Md.

John was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. McAuliffe. The father is employed as a paper finisher at the District Paper Mill. Hungerford will appear at a coroner's inquest, the date to be set.

Because of conflicting stories told by witnesses, it was decided late yesterday to hold an inquest into the death of the Rev. Arthur Henry Thompson, 82, and let a jury decide whether he was a District traffic victim.

Mr. Thompson, a retired Methodist minister, died at Sibley Hospital Thursday of a broken right hip. He was admitted to the hospital October 13.

After his death, police investigation disclosed Mr. Thompson either fell or was knocked down by an automobile at Twelfth and G Streets Northwest, the same day he was taken to the hospital.

In the meantime, police prepared for a hearing before the corporation counsel on a collision at Seventh and G Streets Southeast, between a Police Department prisoners van and a private car.

Seven prisoners and the driver of the private machine were slightly injured in the accident.

Driven by Policeman Walter B. Sanderson, 49, of 1819 First Street Northwest, the van was bound for Police Court with 16 prisoners. It was eastbound on G Street and collided with the automobile of Edward R. Reamy, 29, of 510 Third Street Northwest, southbound on Seventh Street.

Reamy suffered facial lacerations and received first aid at Providence Hospital. The prisoners were transferred to police patrols and taken to court, where they were examined by a doctor from Casualty Hospital.

Park Board Backs Street Extension

Independence Ave. Project Supported Anew; Ickes Reports to Body

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

Prodded by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday voted to push its 11-year-old scheme to extend Independence Avenue to Arlington Memorial Bridge.

The project is urgently desired by the District Commissioners and Capt. Whitehurst as a traffic relief measure and to help accommodate the greater vehicular volume which will result when the new War building in nearby Virginia is completed and occupied by 20,000 workers.

Although the planning agency indorsed the extension as far back as 1930, nothing has ever been done about it largely because of two delicate factors: (1) It would mean the running of a utilitarian highway through an ornamental area, past Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial, and (2) it might interfere with the function of the Tidal Basin as a sanitary flushing agent for Washington Channel.

Ickes Approves

The first deterrent apparently was eliminated yesterday when Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes gave the extension plan his blessing, according to Thomas S. Settle, planning commission secretary.

The latter reported that Ickes approved the proposal, despite the fact that the Cabinet member, in a six-page statement which he read to the commission, strenuously criticized the current practice of utilizing park lands for office building and other unesthetic purposes.

The second obstacle was not hurdled yesterday. Settle asserted that the problem of running Independence Avenue over the north bay of the Tidal Basin must be given further study. The question is whether to fill in this bay or, leaving it intact, to construct a short causeway.

Dimensions of the proposed avenue extension, its width and all other details were withheld by the commission, meeting in executive session.

Other Actions

Confronted with other proposed highway and bridge improvements incidental to the anticipated spurt in District-Virginia traffic next year, when the $31,000,000 War building in Arlington County is due to be completed, the Federal agency,

Approved a comprehensive plan, drawn up by the War Department and Public Roads Administration, which provides for widening and relocating of Columbia Pike, construction of a truck road and revamped Virginia approaches to Arlington and Key Bridges.

Took under advisement a plan for a new bridge which would link the terminus of Lee Boulevard with the foot of Constitution Avenue, only a few hundred yards upstream from Arlington Memorial Bridge. Replacement of Highway Bridge and a new span between Key and Chain Bridges also were discussed.

Agreed on the desirability of widening Twenty-third Street Northwest, from Pennsylvania Avenue to Lincoln Memorial Plaza.

"More Study"

The planning body, concluding its regular monthly session, also:

Withheld action on the request of the Pennsylvania Railroad for approval of its plan to improve and strengthen Railroad Bridge, over the Potomac, by doubling the number of supporting piers and substituting girder superstructure for trusses. "More study needed," said Secretary Settle.

Approved the location of another temporary office building in the Mall. Construction operations, incidentally, already have been started on this structure, destined to house a defense agency and which will face the new Social Security Board Building.

Approved use by the Bureau of Standards of Government-owned land near Reno Road and Van Ness Street Northwest as the site of a three-story testing laboratory.

Acting similarly on the application of the Public Roads Administration, which plans to build two laboratory and one administration buildings on the former Leiter estate, which overlooks the Potomac a mile above Chain Bridge.

Housing Projects

Approved land use plans for defense housing projects in nearby Maryland and Virginia, as well as the Barry Farm low-rent dwelling enterprise in Anacostia, which is to be administered by the Alley Dwelling Authority.

The long-discussed Washington-Baltimore Parkway plan was withdrawn again from the files, the commission voting to ask the Public Roads Administration to begin surveying the route.

In his prepared argument against unlimited encroachment of buildings and highways on the Capital's parklands, Ickes ascribed "much of this confusion to the lack of a continuing planning policy on the part of the War Department."

"Army officers, by the mere fact of their constantly changing assignments, are not in a position to be fully cognizant of the importance of adhering to long range programs prepared by competent planning agencies," he said.

Horse, Buggy Days Really Gone, Farmer Finds

Horse and buggy days returned to Washington yesterday.

The result was a turn for the worse in the already discouraging D. C. traffic situation, scores of red-faced, cussing motorists, and an extra job for police.

The cause of it all—a little be-whiskered Frederick County farmer—wound up in jail charged with being drunk.

It started at 2 a. m. yesterday when the farmer went to his barn and hitched his old, brown mare to a buggy and set out for Washington—45 miles away.

And when he arrived here nearly 18 hours later, he caused more excitement than a bull in a china shop. His horse, Betsy, had gone up a one-way street around the corner from Thirteenth Precinct station; scores of motorists, driving to the Georgetown-George Washington football game, impatiently set up a din with their horns; taxicab drivers shouted and cussed. Finally, a scout car sped up and the farmer and his horse and buggy were taken to the precinct station.

Takes 13 Chickens Along

When the farmer left home yesterday he tied a crate to the rear of his buggy and put 13 chickens in it.

The "agriculturist" was bound for Prince Georges County, he said, with his chickens. But, he was a stranger here and knew no short cuts. And before he knew what had happened he found himself in the middle of a traffic snarl on Sixth Street near T Street Northwest. A crowd soon surrounded the buggy. Several boys had their hands in the chicken crate. The farmer climbed down to look after his chickens. By that time they were gone.

Worried About Horse

Policemen D. W. Miller and R. J. Wagner came on the scene and put the farmer in his buggy, brown derby and all. Wagner led Betsy to the station house.

"What are you gonna do with Betsy?" demanded the farmer. "She is a fine horse, she is!"

Police didn't seem to know but they said they would see that she got some oats and a nice place to sleep.

Betsy was finally taken away by the Humane Society for the night and the farmer went to sleep after a very busy day.

Earle's Military-Musical Marches Into a Solid Hit

"You'll Never Get Rich" Belies Its Title In Richness of Song, Dance and Humor; New Stage Revue Also Is a Nice Parade

"YOU'LL NEVER GET RICH." Columbia picturization of a screen play by Michael Fessier and Ernest Pagano, costarring Fred Astaire and Rita Hayworth, with Robert Benchley, John Hubbard, Osa Massen, Frieda Inescourt, Guinn Williams, Donald MacBride, Cliff Nazarro, Marjorie Gateson, Ann Shoemaker and Boyd Davis. Songs by Cole Porter. Directed by Sidney Lanfield. At the Earle Theater

SO FRED ASTAIRE joined the Army and showed them what to do with their feet!

Not only that. Private Robert Curtis—sometimes masquerading as "Capt. Curtis" in conveniently "borrowed" uniforms—also showed his philandering boss how to get into a deeper matrimonial mess than he was in already and the beautiful chorus girl that he really loved her, despite the fact that she thought his love had "heeled."

Some of this is managed through the medium of delightfully dizzy dialogue, some through antics that would drive any top kick off his nut—as it does—but most of it during the syncopated seductions of the dance and the Cole Porter tunes that supply the excuse. Private Curtis, to be sure, does most of his superlative hoofing on the highly polished maple floor of the guard house, where all of the other confinees seem to be instrumentalists who are also in the groove, but it should be remembered that this is a very special army, dreamed up out of the emergency to make "You'll Never Get Rich" the kind of a rollicking vehicle Fred Astaire ought to have been having right along.

Columbia has gone all-out in equipping this new frolic at the Earle with everything a musical travesty of the training camps ought to have. The cast all wear stars on their shoulder straps, the recreation hall stage expands itself into something of about the proportions of the Grand Central concourse and that music and dancing we were talking about in loaded with super-explosives.

This "You'll Never Get Rich" is no disjointed revue made up of unrelated skits and specialties strung together by a hair. It has a plot. The marital and romantic complications begin immediately Fred Astaire and Rita Hayworth finish the dance that opens the film. That is a number for one of Robert Benchley's mammoth productions to be put on in the theater which he owns and operates largely as a filling station for his amorous impulses. After Frieda Inescourt, as his wife, intercepts a diamond bracelet, instead of the Chinese backscratcher intended for her wedding anniversary gift, Mr. Astaire is pretty glad to get into the Army by draft to get out of the deception into which he has been dragged. From that point on it is Army regulations against the course of reasonably true love, with the top sergeant placing Cupid on the casualty list in every engagement.

A Carefully Hand-Picked Cast

If there were anything new to be said about Fred Astaire's dancing, it should be said here. He is at the peak of his form in every number and makes a monkey of the machine guns in speed and precision. In Rita Hayworth he has a new partner who matches him step for step and performs her part with all the skill of a seasoned romantic comedienne. Donald MacBride fortifies his position as the musical screen's foremost exemplar of a sergeancy's comic cussedness and Robert Benchley wears his role of the carefree, but not footloose, impresario like the perfectly tailored garment it is. Frieda Inescourt is properly and humorously frigid as his ubiquitous wife and Osa Massen a perfect explanation of one of his most violent attachments. Cliff Nazarro, with his baffling double-talk; Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, a dim-witted selectee; John Hubbard, the luckless lover; Marjorie Gateson, Ann Shoemaker, Boyd Davis, as the camp commandant, and those jailbird jazz artists all aid in making this an elegant martial muster.

Harry Anger's adroit staging makes the Earle's new stage revue seem bigger than it is. It is up to standard dimensions, at that. The Billingtons, boy and girl, open the proceedings with a continuation of the Astaire brand of tapping. Phyllis Colt sets off a group of songs to high advantage to both them and her, and Willie, West and McGinty demonstrate the value of perfect timing in their ridiculous "A Million Building Blunders," the epic of lunatic laborers. In between times, the Roxyettes do a tap routine to the "Pique Dame" overture, of all things; animate a "Music Shop," impersonate "Men at Work" and finally solve the Capital's police problem the way it should be solved!

"Bomber," one of the best of the film recordings of the National Defense effort, with its Carl Sandburg commentary, and a Merrie Melodie color cartoon comedy, "All This and Rabbit Stew," are the remaining components of a Big Bertha among current entertainments.

A Rhythmic Romp in Rollicking Rookie Romance

FRED ASTAIRE AND RITA HAYWORTH in a staccato scene in "You'll Never Get Rich," Columbia's contribution to the season's syncopated salutes to the armed services of the country in a period of entertainment emergency. This melodious, martial melange now is on view on the screen at the Earle Theater, with Robert Benchley, John Hubbard, Osa Massen, Frieda Inescourt, Cliff Nazarro and such like also prominent in the cast

Metropolitan

Invariably there is something surprising when a film whose appeal seems definitely limited somehow fools its exhibitors by becoming a public favorite. Such a film is "One Foot in Heaven," which the Metropolitan is continuing for its third week downtown after its world premiere at the Earle.

This is the Fredric March-Martha Scott screen version of the biography Hartzell Spence wrote of his father, a mid-western pastor whose career covered the first quarter of this century. They were eventful years, years when America was changing its habits, treating itself to the tolerance so vital today.

The pastor's struggles, his family's hardships are told with humor and affection, lacking the stuffy quality so much to be feared in such an undertaking.

Plural Behind Urals

New York, Oct. 17.

Harry Hopkins has 80 pages of notes which he made during his conferences with Stalin. And only from Stalin, himself, was the President's emissary supplied with information about the Soviet war effort. For when Hopkins landed at Archangel, and met the Russian generals—and even at his meeting with Molotov and Litvinoff—they all were polite, but steered their conversations away from the problems of war . . . Stalin told Hopkins that for every piece of armament captured in the Ukraine, the Russians had a duplicate in the regions behind the Ural Mountains . . . Stalin didn't invite Hopkins to dinner at his home. During their talk, Mrs. Stalin phoned, and asked her husband when he expected to be home. Stalin explained to Hopkins that late, every night, he dines only with his wife and a few of their friends.

Plight of the Stumble 'B's'!

Hollywood, Oct. 17.

With the burial of the "B's" at Warners, I heard a newcomer say, "Now what's going to happen to us? Where can we get our training?" Well, you can count on the fingers of one hand the stars that were made stars by "B" pictures. But there are dozens who got their names in lights because they played opposite big stars. Where would Lana Turner be if she hadn't played opposite Jimmy Stewart, Spence Tracy, or Clark Gable? Joan Leslie would still be unknown without the aid of Gary Cooper and "Sergeant York." Brenda Marshall got her big chance through Errol Flynn, so did Alexis Smith. And look what happened to Rita Hayworth after she played with Jimmy Cagney and Fred Astaire. I maintain that only by playing with the best, which means the finest stars and directors, can a newcomer develop. Good acting depends so much on inspiration. And I, for one, hope that all the "B's" in Hollywood will be buried before the winter snow starts flying.

JOAN LESLIE

Monty Woolley was fascinated as he watched his double tumble down the stairs for the final scene in "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Said Monty: "I feel black and blue just watching." Said the stunt man, "I get 35 bucks a fall. Please let there be retakes."

If Rise Stevens and John Carroll co-star in "Rio Rita," it means Edgar Selwyn's story "Pierre of the Plains" will again be postponed. The way that story's been kicked about, if there's a shred of it left to get into production I'll be astounded. Because Carroll is the French swashbuckling type, it was Edgar's idea to put him in a series of those pictures. When first script was finished, it was so good powers-that-be said, "We can't waste this on Carroll," (who was then climbing), "—we'll give it to Gable." So the thing was rewritten, half a million was added to the budget. By that time Gable had dozens of pictures lined up, so it was rewritten again for Carroll. Now that Carroll has reached stardom, I suppose he'll be too good for it.

Times little irony; George Bancroft and Adolph Menjou, who years ago were the biggest rivals at Paramount, have been cast as business partners in "Syncopation"... Charles Laughton will play his entire role in "Tuttles of Tahiti" barefooted.

Jack Kirkland's and Dwight Wiman's new one at the Music Box is authored by Henry Myers, Ed Eliscu and Jay Gorney, who gave us "Meet the People." Looks as if some more talented kids will get a break.

Never a dull moment, when Orson Welles and his zanies disport themselves. Outside Orson's office is large cage of canaries, and for 10 days a forlorn blackbird had been doing a daily dress parade for the blondes. Orson ordered its removal, claiming it was an "ornethological wolf" and would give the place a bad name. Then along came Tim Holt with a pocket full of birdseed and discovered the poor thing was starved. "Give a wolf a bad name," said Tim, "—ten to one that's all any of 'em are, just hungry!"

Jimmy Cagney tells me over half the actors in "Captains of the Clouds" are now overseas fighting Hitler. They were cadets in training in the Canadian Air Force and served as background.

Having finished "Honolulu Lu," Lupe Velez does a Honolulu Lupe. Goes over for a month's vacation. All this talk of Hawaii's being crowded by Army and Navy men, Loretta Young says, is the bunk. Says there's plenty of room for tourists and stars.

Do you believe George Tobias collected $50u from Richard Wherf by dropping 35 pounds in 35 days? Ate vitamin pills instead of three squares.

Katharine Hepburn Shatters Precedent

For years, it has been an unbroken rule that no woman be allowed to invade the men's star dressing room building at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, although male stars have taken up temporary residence in the women's star building when dressing rooms were scarce.

Now Katharine Hepburn has shattered the precedent by moving into Robert Montgomery's dressing room, next to Robert Taylor's and right over Clark Gable's, without a dissenting voice from the regular tenants. She'll occupy it during the filming of "The Woman of the Year," her new starring picture with Spencer Tracy.

There is only one item in the Montgomery dressing room for which Miss Hepburn will have no use—his famous and much envied barber chair.

Costly Duds

Bob Wills, Oklahoma cowboy maestro, who went to Hollywood to appear in "Go West, Young Lady" with his Texas Playboys, left practically all his earnings in the movie capital. He bought a complete new Sunday outfit—saddle, spurs, chaps and vest—for $4,300. They were gold and silver trimmed.

Hunting Fans

Clark Gable probably receives more hunting fan mail than any other star. He has received thousands of photographs of wild animals from hunters in all parts of the world, the most recent being a series of candid camera shots of a herd of wild buffalo in Canada.

When everyone was worrying about England—most of the English were talking about a movie.

Because even danger can get monotonous, because even a besieged people can get stale and slack, England still makes movies. And they try to make movies that have to do, not with war, but with the real enjoyment of life as it can be, because that is exactly what all people—particularly besieged people—long for and fight for.

Such a picture has recently been finished, near London, after having been bombed out of the studio five times. Very quietly it has proceeded to steal the hearts of men and women all over England. Every afternoon and every night, they are forgetting the war, by the tens of thousands, as they sit and watch this film of things as they were before—and as they will be again in their lives.

The name of the picture is "Quiet Wedding." The star is Margaret Lockwood, whom Americans know as the star of "The Lady Vanishes," "Night Train," and "Girl in the News." The director is Anthony Asquith, the man who directed "Pygmalion." And the picture itself; the story? It can be told in ten words. A girl becomes engaged, prepares to get married—and does.

That's all. But people walk out of the theatre realising that they have laughed, they have cried and they have laughed again. Women, misty-eyed, men no less affected, feel they have had the all-too-infrequent pleasure of having been touched magically by emotions warm and human.

"Quiet Wedding," with all its realness, its laughter and its tears, comes to the Pix Theatre, 13th and H Street, N.W., today, Saturday, at 11 A.M.

The National Football League will never be completely big league-ish until some of its bright minds junk the silly schedule-making and write a semblance of balance into the operation of the schedule. Thus far the league has been content to wink at the horrible inequities.

POVICH

It is a fact, though, that certain teams in the league don't mingle on the same gridiron with certain other league members during the season. Sometimes there is a two-year lapse in relations between certain teams. At best, the division championships that are decided are tained.

There's nothing equitable, for example, in the schedules of the Redskins and the New York Giants who are supposed to be fighting for the Eastern Division title. The Redskins have games scheduled with the two toughest teams in the West, the Bears and the Packers, yet the Giants will meet neither of those clubs during the season. On this lop-sided basis the Eastern Division title will be decided nevertheless.

The schedule calls for 11 games by each club in the league, yet with only 10 teams in the league each club does not play every other team. The Redskins, for instance, won't be on the same field with the Chicago Cardinals and the Detroit Lions this season and, as we were saying, the Giants won't play the Bears and Packers.

Why not? Well, the league has planned it so that each club plays each other club in its respective division twice during the year. Why that is so necessary escapes us, particularly when it calls for the omission of games with two clubs in the other division.

Choice of Lesser Evil

If the club owners are insistent on an 11-game schedule provision could at least be made for one game against every other club. Instead of four home-and-home series, two could be scheduled. Schedules would not be identical even then, but it would be the choice of the lesser evil, and obviously more fair to the fans of all cities.

The Giants went into the 1941 season as favorites to win the Eastern title not particularly because they appeared to be a better football team than the Redskins but because they don't have to meet the Bears or the Packers. While the Redskins are risking defeat against those two clubs, the Giants will be fattening their percentage against such as the Chicago Cardinals and Detroit Lions. Suspense went out of the race with the publication of the league schedule.

As the standings are computed, a Giant victory over the Cardinals, for example, counts as much as would a Redskin triumph over the Bears, yet as tests the two games are not comparable. If the Redskins win the Eastern Division title, it would be a super feat in view of their schedule. If the Giants win, there can not be a great deal of pride-taking. They were operating against the West's push-over teams.

We scarcely expect the league to humor us by revising its schedule set-up and thus permitting each club to battle it out with each other league member at least once during a season. There has been no concerted squawk by the fans and the current schedules seems to suit the league nicely. With each team playing eight of its 11 games against clubs in its own division, traveling and hotel expenses are saved and that, of course, is an item that appeals to the club owners.

Baseball Fans Would Howl

The situation, though, is analogous to a baseball schedule that would be unthinkable. Suppose, for instance, that the Yankees won the American League pennant from the second-place Red Sox after a schedule in which the Yanks played the bulk of their games against second-division clubs while the Red Sox were forced to play first-division teams almost exclusively. There would be a horrible howl. Yet that situation obtains in the football league. It can't be completely remedied owing to the shortness of the season, but it could be greatly alleviated by pitting each league club against the other at least once.

Washington is in the same league with the Green Bay Packers, yet Washington fans haven't seen the Packers play in Griffith Stadium for nearly three years. They will, on November 30, but it is nevertheless a heluva note when one city in the league hasn't seen one of the league's teams in action since 1937. A one-year lapse is understandable, owing to the exigencies of the short season, but when nearly four years intervene before such as the Packers show in Washington, something is certainly screwy with the schedule.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 17.—Will you please stop reading this piece, slip on a sweater and trot four quick laps around the block? How about getting up an hour earlier all next week and exercising? Next time you drive some place, why not park the bus a half mile from your destination, and walk the rest of the distance? Let's all stay away from the football stadiums this weekend, where we plan to sit and watch, and do something about arousing our own sluggish systems, shall we?

CONSIDINE

Of course we won't. At least, most of us won't. But it so happens that there is a sincerely patriotic little group of men and women in this country today which is out to make you bestir yourself in these and many other ways. The group, headed by Jack Kelly, the veteran sculler from Philadelphia, believes that the salvation of this country, if we become engaged in an all out war, will depend largely on the physical condition of the civilian population.

Hence a nation-wide program, enlisting some of the most distinguished names in sport, is well under way. But this athletic division of Fiorella LaGuardia's civilian defense unit has a tremendous task ahead of it. The staggering job of retooling the Nation into "an arsenal of Democracy" is kid stuff compared to the job of getting Blubbery Old Pop out of his morris chair and persuading the old guy to do something about his bay window, his lack of wind and his spreading beam.

Mom, herself, is a little easier to convince. She has been yapping for years about going on that radish juice and stewed fern diet and taking up golf or knee bends, so she can pour herself back into that size 14 again. She'll go along with what Alice Marble, chief of the Kelly Women's Auxiliary, will ask her to do. At least she'll be more inclined to do so than her husband and sons.

'We Have Become Softies'

That we have become a Nation of softies, none can deny. As Kelly pointed out to a representative group of out-of-condition sports writers at shapeless Toots Shor's calory den on Thursday, America became the most he-manly Nation in the world because when the Founding Fathers were building it, every one worked. There were no buttons to push, no machines to carry you hither and yon, no steam-shovels to take the place of hundreds of men with pick and shovel, no washing machines, no escalators (they've even got them on golf courses now), no thermostats to regulate furnace heat, no way to get a meal except tramp through the woods and shoot one.

The machine and the gadget craze has made us into a Nation of sitters, no doers, Kelly is convinced.

"The most physically decadent country in the world was France," the lean, ruddy oarsman said to the respectful palefaces around the luncheon board. "Where is France today? Look at the faces of those German soldiers. Everyone looks like an athlete. Most of them were born and reared during the days of German privation.

"They had no soft living; no rich foods. And from their earliest youth they were regimented into physical training groups. That isn't quite our way of doing things, but I believe that we should copy whatever Germany has done that is good.

We Should Want to Exercise

"There are eight billion dollars worth of school buildings in this country, used only a few hours a day. There should be some way in which the entire population could get the benefits of the sports equipment and playing fields of those schools, after hours. Our job is to make Americans want to exercise. A United Cigar Store manager told me recently that those stores which have a step or two leading into the shop don't do nearly the business that those whose shops are on exact pavement level do."

Kelly more or less stumbled into his present work. Seems he wrote a guest column for a Philadelphia sports writer who was on his vacation. His theme was a prediction that 35 per cent of the draftees would be found physically unfit for military service. President Roosevelt, an old sports page reader, happened to see the article and invited him to the White House. The President doubted Kelly's 35 per cent—was so astounded when it turned out to be 45 per cent that he asked Kelly to go to work and do a Paul Revere on the Nation's dormant muscles.

And he says, "We're the wealthiest Nation on earth. We should be the healthiest, too."

So get out of that chair, you.

Horsemen's Strike Is Averted at Laurel

All Demands Met, Racing Body Helps

5-Point Petition Accepted by Track; MarylandCommission Acts as Arbitrator

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Writer

Laurel, Md., Oct. 17.—Maryland's racing "strike" has been settled. The controversy btween horsemen and track officials, which threatened to curtail if not erase tomorrow's program here, ended at a conference early tonight with members of the Maryland Racing Commission acting as arbitrators. However, the smoke of battle had hardly begun to rise when there was a new flare-up that almost threw the situation back on its heels.

With a few minor exceptions the Maryland State Fair, Inc., granted the demands of the Maryland Horseman's Protective Association made at a meeting last night. However, track officials during the day had drawn an eight-race program for tomorrow. When a settlement was reached on the demands, some horsemen then tried to bring about a reopening of the entries for the Saturday card.

The Maryland Racing Commission went into a huddle and ruled that the program would have to stand. Chairman Chester F. Hockley said that entries had been made in good faith and had been published and that it would be unfair to change them in any way.

Demands Met

The track met the demands of the horsemen thusly: (1) Shower baths and additional sanitary equipment will be installed before September 1, 1942. (2) All barns will be wired for lighting by that date. (3) A parking space for 100 cars of owners and trainers will be made available. (4) Agreement to furnish badges without service charge to wives of owners and trainers. (5) In future, the advertised amount of all purses will be redistributed when such races do not fill.

The settlement ended a day of excitement around the secretary's office. Members of the horseman's association were true to their word that they would not enter horses for Saturday's card unless their demands were met. They had excepted two stakes — the Spalding Lowe Jenkins and the Maryland Handicap. When the organized horsemen failed to appear, track officials solicited entries from outside horsemen and more than three hours after the entries were to have closed, they completed the eight-run card.

Five of the races advertised in the book of the meeting filled while three substitutes were made.

Jockeys on Their Side

An official of the horsemen's association said tonight that it would have been virtually impossible for the track to operate tomorrow had not the controversy been settled. He said that the jockeys, stable hands and vanmen were in sympathy with the horsemen and that riders would not accept mounts unless the differences were patched up.

Strangely the Spalding Lowe Jenkins, the $5000 race for 2-year-olds, drew more horses than the track had anticipated. It was believed that the entries of Alsab and Colchis would scare out several horses. Instead of a field of not more than four, the Jenkins drew seven entries. The $7500 Maryland Handicap was the lure for a like number of starters.

Duquesne Records Fourth Straight Of Season, 7 to 0

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Oct. 17.—The favored Duquesne Dukes tonight scored their ninth straight football victory and their fourth this season, but managed only a single touchdown against a hard-fighting St. Vincent eleven which grudgingly yielded, 7-0, in a 50-50 battle before 8500 fans in Forbes Field.

After being outplayed in the first half, the Dukes saved their face in the last period, driving down the field from their own 34 on passes and timely rushes by Ray Harkins, 185-pound substitute halfback. Harkins circled end from the 3-yard stripe to score, and Johnny Robisky place-kicked for the point.

Landis Does Big Business While In Hospital Bed

By the Associated Press

Petoskey, Mich., Oct. 17.—From his hospital sickbed, Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis today did half a million dollars' worth of business.

He signed checks for the players' share of the 1941 World Series receipts. The checks were sent to Landis' Chicago office for distribution.

Landis is recovering from bronchial pneumonia which developed on a post-series fishing trip near here. His physician, Dr. Dean C. Burns, said he was steadily improving.

Miami Defeats Rollins, 21 to 0

Miami, Fla., Oct. 17 (AP).—Miami gathered steam in the second half before 17,566 spectators in the Orange Bowl Stadium tonight to roll over Rollins, 21-0, and remain among the unbeaten, untied football teams.

The alert but outmanned Rollins team balked two Miami thrusts within its 5-yard line in the first period and played the Hurricanes to a standstill in the second.

Navy Eleven Favored Over Cornell Today

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Post Staff Writer

Baltimore, Oct. 17.—Cornell's Big Red football squad set foot on Southern soil for the first time in the school's history today with a two-hour workout in Municipal Stadium where the Ithicans will meet Navy tomorrow in what is billed as the Nation's headline battle. Kick-off is 2 p. m.

Upwards of 40,000 fans, including Maryland Governor Herbert R. O'Connor and Mayor Howard Jackson, are expected to file into the mammoth horseshoe stadium to see the meeting of the Eastern grid powerhouses, both unbeaten to date.

Cornell, Ivy League champions in 1938 and 1939 and loser only to Dartmouth and Penn last year, the former on the controversial fifth down incident, will meet Navy for the first time in an underdog role.

Cornell Unscored Upon

Coach Carl Snavely's great club of last year lost 20 lettermen by graduation and of the returning seven only two ever started a game. The Big Red machine is unscored on to date, however, with successive victories over Syracuse, 6-0, and Harvard last week, 7-0.

Navy has zoomed into the leading contenders for mythical national honors with an unexpected 115-point total against three fair teams, William and Mary, West Virginia and Lafayette, and were scored upon for the first time last week when Bill Busik was caught in the end zone for a safety on an attempted punt runback.

Busik, Navy's most publicized back since Buzz Borries, is already commanding All-American mention and from him Navy men are look-

The Football Front Today:

Northwestern Faces Test Against Michigan

Navy-Cornell, Texas-Arkansas, Tenn.-Alabama Games Hold Interest of Nation's Grid Fans

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 17.—Through the first three weeks of the season Michigan, Northwestern, Navy and Texas have taken on the appearance of ranking college football powers. Just how much of this was show and how much was good, solid football substance should be shown tomorrow.

Michigan and Northwestern will meet at Evanston in the day's top-flight attraction, the first of the "round-robin" which also involves Minnesota and Ohio State, the Big Ten's other aces. Navy, after rolling up 115 points to its three rivals' total of two, and those on a safety, should find Cornell's defense considerably tougher, and Texas, a high scorer against teams from three major outside conferences, will make its Southwest Conference bow against Arkansas.

There is enough dynamite packed into the program to upset any forecast. Trusting we have lighted the fuse at the right end, here are this week's selections (home teams first, probable attendance in parentheses):

NORTHWESTERN-MICHIGAN (48,000)—Northwestern has kept the statistics-keepers busy in its two starts, but hasn't been up against anything like the Wolverine line. Michigan has its share of backs, too. Northwestern is rated a slight favorite, but here goes for a flyer on Michigan, in what may be a free-scoring free-for-all.

NAVY-CORNELL (40,000) — The Ithacans have made one touchdown a Saturday serve their purpose. They haven't faced anybody with the Middies' punch. A pretty solid vote for Navy.

TEXAS-ARKANSAS (20,000)—This is a league where most anything can happen, but the Razorbacks seem to be the weak sister. Texas.

PRINCETON-PENN (30,000) — Those big Tigers may get organized one of these days. Penn has size and speed as well. Penn.

TENNESSEE-ALABAMA (30,000) —The first time in years these two have come up to this game already defeated. Alabama, but probably close.

NEBRASKA-INDIANA (35,000)—Those Huskies have looked good each week, without getting much notice. Nebraska.

STANFORD-SAN FRANCISCO (15,000)—The Indians to bounce back from that Oregon State debacle. Stanford.

G.U. Frosh Win, Miller Makes 101-Yard Run

Charley Miller, brother of the old Notre Dame fullback, Steve Miller, yesterday led Georgetown's freshman eleven to its third straight victory over George Washington's yearlings, 12-0, at Griffith Stadium.

The stocky Miller scored both touchdowns, one on a fourth-period record-tieing 101-yard dash on an intercepted pass, and the other on a 32-yard pass from Lenny Bonforte, another fine-looking Hoya back.

Miller's dash tied the unofficial District record for length of a touchdown run. The original mark was established by Dick Nelson, of Tech High School, in a game against Gonzaga in 1933, and Nelson's effort also resulted from an intercepted pass.

Miller's electrifying sprint came early in the fourth period after he snatched a pass thrown by G. W.'s Tony Crem from the Georgetown 15. Miller took the ball on

Maryland Soccer Team Turns Back Gettysburg, 2-0

Maryland University's soccer team made it three in a row yesterday by blanking Gettysburg, 2-0, at College Park.

The Terps dominated the play throughout. After a scoreless first quarter, Maryland's Maizel tallied after taking the ball from scrimmage with a few minutes remaining in the second period.

Main scored the other Maryland goal. Tilley aided Main for the score in the last period.

Baylor Bows To Villanova By 14-6 Score

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 17.—A scrappy Villanova eleven remained unbeaten and untied tonight by capitalizing on two quick thrusts to wallop the previously undefeated Baylor Bears, 14 to 6, before 31,360 at Shibe Park.

Sophomore Joe Pezelski ran back a punt 58 yards for one Villanova touchdown and set up the second with a 27-yard return of another kick.

Pezelski's long run came midway of the first quarter and was a beautiful bit of broken-field running aided by some nifty blocking by Bill Sullivan and Tony Anderson. His 27-yard return came at the start of the last period and put the ball on the Baylor 18. His pass to Zig Zamlynski, another sophomore, made it first down on the 6. A penalty then shoved the Bears back to their 1 from where Zamlynski promptly lunged over to assure Villanova's third straight victory.

Lacks the Punch

In between these two occasions Baylor, seeking its fourth triumph in a row, shoved the Wild Cats all over the field. Except for a sustained 86-yard drive in the second period for their touchdown, however, the Waco bears lacked the punch within striking distance of the Villanova goal line.

Baylor reached the Villanova 36 in the first quarter, the 16 in the second period, the 14 in the third and the 19 in the final period, but failed to cash in on these opportunities due to the furious Villanova defense, backed up by Joe Yednock's great punting.

Altogether Baylor backed up 13 first downs to four, three of Villanovas coming in the last quarter when Yednock got loose for two runs of 15 and 33 yards. Baylor gained 103 yards rushing to 82 and in the air 82 yards to 108.

Bulvin Paces G.U.'s March To Victory

Scores Georgetown's Initial Touchdown, Sets Up Its Second And Passes to Third

By Jack Munhall

"Bullet" Benny Bulvin who zoomed to stardom by his 1940 performance against George Washington, shot to new and brilliant heights last night as he directed Georgetown to its most crushing victory in 18-years over the Colonials. The score was 25-0.

Stunning an estimated crowd of 18,000 fans with their most savage offensive display of the season, Bulvin and the hard-hitting Hoyas put together scoring marches of 88, 38 and 65 yards, respectively, for their third successive modern triumph over the G Streeters.

After a scoreless first period in which the prodigious punting of G. W. Sophomore Jim Graham staved them off, the Hoyas struck for two touchdowns by ground in the second period, and then added single tallies in the third and fourth periods, both as the result of passes.

Jinx Has No Effect on Bulvin

It was Friday and this was the thirteenth game in 51 years between the hot intercity rivals, but the combination jinx had no effect on Bulvin. The 188-pound "fireplug" halfback performed in all-American style to preserve the Hoyas' record of never having lost to George Washington. The Hoyas also shut out the Colonials for the third straight time in their modern series.

Bulvin personally scored the first touchdown after four minutes of the second period, set up the second with his running, and passed to End Chris Pavich for the third. Fullback Joe Gyorgydeak, making an impressive local debut as a Georgetown starter, tallied the second and Speedster Jack Doolan raced 53 yards with an intercepted pass for the fourth. Only in booting conversions were the Hoyas deficient on offense. Bulvin, place-kicking the point after the first score, added the Hoyas' lone extra point.

Colonials Outclassed

George Washington, weakened when Star Guard Hank Agusiewicz was unable to play, was completely outclassed by the Hoyas for the first time in the three years it has battled overwhelmingly favored Georgetown teams. The Buff and Blue netted only 59 yards rushing and 21 yards passing against a net 201 yards rushing and 98 yards by aerials for the Hoyas.

For 41 minutes the Colonials were without even a first down to show for their efforts to dent Georgetown's bigger and much stronger line, led by Tackle George Perpich and End Art Lemke. At the finish G. W. had only two first downs, and not until the final minutes of the game did they get past Georgetown's 48-yard line. A last-minute forward pass, Paul Weber to Walter Fedora, gave G. W. the ball on G. U.'s 42. This threat was removed from the Hoyas when Guard Pete Calcagno intercepted a pass.

A punting duel between Grahams, making his starting debut for G. W. in place of the injured "Slick" Gudmundson, and Georgetown Quarterback Lou Falcone featured the scoreless opening quarter. And

Joe Louis Given 1-A Rating; Faces An Immediate Call

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 17.—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis, who was examined earlier this week by draft board physicians, was placed tonight in Class 1-A, subject to immediate military service.

Chairman T. O. Fentress of local Selective Service Board No. 84 announced the titleholder's classification and said Louis probably would be inducted into the Army by next month.

Florida Is Choice to Beat Injury-Ridden Maryland Today

Passes Seen Chief Hope Of Terps

Tommy Harrison, Triple Threat Ace, Is Big Gun in 'Gator Backfield

Maryland's eleven today will attempt to regain its winning stride before homecoming fans when it meets strong Florida at 2:30 at College Park.

The Terps held to a tie by Western Maryland and slaughtered by Duke after they beat Hampden-Sydney in their opener, will be a decided underdog.

Florida's record is not impressive, but the Gators played good ball in losing a pair of 6-0 decisions, to Mississippi State, 14-0, conqueror of Alabama, and undefeated Villanova.

Mont is Missing

A crowd of 10,000 is expected to see an injury-riddled Ol' Liner eleven match its speed and deception against Florida's power and ruggedness. Maryland will go into the game minus its regular left halfback and signal caller, Tommy Mont, and also Jack Gilmore, second string end. Gilmore will be out for the rest of the season with a broken bone in his foot. Both he and Moht were hurt as Maryland lost to Duke, 50-0 last week.

In Mont's tailback position today will be either Mearle DuVall, a senior, or Jack Brenner, a sophomore. Both are fine passers and Maryland is expected to make considerable use of their ability to hurl the ball. On the receiving end of many passes probably will be Duke Alexander, six-foot 4-inch sophomore end.

Harrison Is Threat

Florida's big offensive gun is Tommy Harrison, a brilliant triple-threat halfback who romps behind a fast and powerful 'Gator line led by "Peanut" Hull, a big tackle, and Forrest Ferguson, a shifty end who specializes in end-around plays.

An attractive Homecoming Day program has been arranged for the Maryland alumni. Highlights of the festivities will be the crowning of Homecoming Queen. She is Elmira Pearson, chosen Miss Maryland by the Terrapin, official school paper.

Maryland's 65-piece band will strut its stuff before the game, between halves, and after the argument is over.

Lee Atwood Wins Horn-Blowing Contest; 100 Entered in Events at Laurel

Several hundred enthusiastic fox hunters and friends applauded Lee Atwood, Layhill, Md., as he won the horn-blowing contest at the close of the Maryland Fox Hunter's Association annual field trials and bench show which has been held near Laurel, Md. for the past week. Competing with 14 other contestants, Atwood captured the coveted prize only after a run off of a triple tie with Willard Marlow, Fairland and L. T. Aitcheson, of Laurel.

With sportsmen from Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania entering over 100 dogs the affair was considered the most successful in the history of the association.

Climaxing the program with an oyster roast on the headquarters grounds at Willis Hall near Laurel, presentation of awards by Association President A. G. Rolfe, of Poolesville, and the newly elected head, O. W. Anderson, of Gaithersburg, marked the afternoon's activities.

Win Four Awards

Most consistent winner of the trials which started Monday, October 13, was Milton Hankins, of Pylesville, Md., whose dogs captured four major awards, and nine money places. His entries won the Clarence Gilpin Memorial Challenge Cup, the "Cy" Cummings Memorial Challenge Cup, the Louis Bolden Challenge Cup and the Aitcheson Memorial Cup. The Z. M. Waters Memorial Cup was won by Congressman John S. Gibson, of Georgia, while C. R. Cole, of Laurel, took the Abbe Challenge Cup. Glen Mary Kennels, of Elkton, Md., won the Cummings Cup in the Derby trials and Congressman Gibson, the Higgins Memorial Cup.

In the All Age Trials the Leonard Edwards Challenge cup went to Thomas Easton, Monrovia. B. Louis Bolden, Laurel was awarded a silver cup for having the highest scoring hound the first day in the All Age Trials and James W. Brown received a similar cup for having the highest scored hound the first day in the Derby trials.

Approximately 75 dogs were entered in the bench show which was considered the outstanding feature of the week's events. May, owned by R. E. Fulton, Laurel, Md. was awarded the Champion Royal Tramp Challenge Trophy as the best hound in the show while the Champion Dancing Tramp Challenge Trophy went to Buzzard Boy, owned by Milton Hankins, Pylesville, Md. as the best of the opposite sex.

Collins, Boyd High Scorers In Pin League

Guy Collins, AAA, and E. Boyd, E. J. Payne, topped the Automotive Bowling League with respective scores of 145 and 384 last night. Wolfe Motors led for high team game with a 569 count, while the Ice Palace drives were found easy by Wheeler, Inc., as the team garnered top set with a 1637 effort. Pohanka Service, Cherner Motor, Parkway Motors and Trew Motors won over opponents. Arcade - Pontiac tops the league by one-game margin over Emerson & Orme Service and Cherner, the latter two deadlocked for the runner-up spot.

Clarendon Church League

Upperco's 151 for Methodist No. 3 was high single in the Clarendon Church League, but the set laurels were garnered by a 362 count by Falls Church No. 1 pinsman, R. Stewart. Upperco's high enabled his team to win high game after a 574 pinfall, and Mount Olivet rolled 1605 to be credited for top set and then continued to win all three from Methodist No. 1. Faith Lutheran, league leaders with 11-4, won all three from Columbia Baptist.

Ice Palace Ladies

Mrs. Sheehan of the Orioles and "Boots" Workman of the Cardinals rolled respective highs of 134 and 340 in the Ice Palace Ladies League, with the latter's score aiding the Cardinals to the odd skirmish from the Woodpeckers even though the latter totaled 522 for a season record game. The Cardinals won set laurels with a 1451 total. The league-leading Eagles won all three from the Redskins.

Independent League

Louise Diehl, of Shah & Shah, and May Richardson, of Charles Grill, tied for high game with 132 in the Ladies Independent League at Arcadia while Ruth McClintic once more took high set honors with a 334 total for Daly's Food Shop. Shah & Shah and Mid-City Auto divided team high with respective totals of 547 and 1547.

Brookland Ladies

Edna Ward continued her fireballing in the Brookland Ladies League at Russ Diehl's alleys and led for the second straight week with a 149 single and 356 set for her Pyle's Motors team. The quintet also won the odd tilt from Gemeny's Flowers. Moore Hardware, outside of taking the champion Federal Litho girls for three straight, posted a season high game of 556 and went on to win set laurels with 1556. Continental Life won a sweep over Jack & Jill School.

Taxicab League

Both Eddie Keith, Bell No. 1, and Frank Caruso, Yellow Cab No. 2, banged out the high single in the D. C. Taxicab League at the Ice Palace, each being credited with a 141 game although Keith went on to take top set with his 392 effort. Premier No. 1 counted 606 to win high team game while a 1698 count garnered the set honor for Yellow Cab No. 2. Taxi Go-Round tops the loop with 16 wins against 5 losses.

Fort Worth, Tex. 17. (AP)—Helen Dettweiler of Washington, D. C., tumbled the favored Patty Berg of Minneapolis, 3 and 2, today to enter Sunday's finals of the Texas Women's Open against Fort Worth's Aniela Goldthwaite.

Mrs. Goldthwaite eliminated San Antonio's Jo Henson, 4-3.

The 36-hole finals were set back until Sunday to avoid conflict with tomorrow's T. C. U.-Texas A. & M. football game.

the run from his left defensive halfback position, reached his own goal line in one stride, and seemingly reached G. W.'s goal line with a couple more. So swiftly did the stocky youngster move that not a hand was laid on him.

Though that was Miller's outstanding contribution to the victory that preserved the Little Hoyas' undefeated and unscored-on record in this series, it was just one of many brilliant feats by this talented back.

Back in the first period Miller had grabbed a 22-yard pass from Bonforte on the George Washington 10, eluded Joe Oliszewski, who was covering him, and spun over the goal line. Bonforte, whose twisting and spinning punt returns and end sweeps thrilled the small crowd throughout the first half, bruised his ribs during the Hoyas' 55-yard scoring drive. He sat out the second half while Miller took over the starring role.

Among other things Miller got off a 71-yard quick kick in the third quarter that placed the Colonials in a hole from which they were hard pressed to emerge.

The game started out as a battle between two fiercely charging and crack defensive lines, with neither able to do much offensively in the first quarter. Neither team made a first down in the opening quarter.

Hoyas Short Scoring

Georgetown started its first scoring drove early in the second period. The elusive Bonforte, a former St. Benedict's ace, rhumba-ed his way 15 yards to the Georgetown 45 on a punt from Frank Seno, the Colonials' best back. Miller and Fullback Tom Conway picked up a first down on the G. W. 46, and Conway and Bonforte made another on the 32. Then Bonfort passed to Miller who sneaked in front of Olezewski to snatch the ball, and then wheeled around and dove over. Bonfort, who had been hurt on his punt return, attempted a conversion which End Bill Birch blocked for G. W.

Although G. W. outdowned G U., 8 to 5, it's only real scoring threat was the one engineered by Crem's passing to Don McNary, a 6-foot 5½-inch end, before Miller ended it with his thrilling dash.

Both lines were impressive defensively, with Center Ed Kowalski and Tackle Joe Drum standing out for Georgetown, and McNary and Birch for the Colonials.

A Georgetown frosh victory over George Washington has for two years presaged a victory for the Hoya varsity over the Colonials.

Eagles Prep For Redskins Tomorrow

The Philadelphia Eagles, who have compiled an advantage in the statistics column over the Dodgers, Pirates and Giants twice, but only having beaten the Pirates, are going to make up for those scoring lapses against the Redskins Sunday, according to Quaker City reports.

The Redskins were scrimmaged in midweek for the first time in years last Tuesday, while the Eagles were scrimmaged as late as Thursday, something unheard of in practice sessions for the Philadelphians.

Coach "Greasy" Neale's young club, which will include eight rookies in the starting line-up, is reported to have shown a tremendous improvement the past week in plays from the "T" formation and he has told them to score Sunday or take the consequences.

A glance at the statistics column shows Redskin Mentor Flaherty that the Eagle attack includes two of the league's leading passers in Tommy Thompson, who has completed 25 of 50, and Foster Watkins, the West Texas State rookie, with six out of nine, including two for touchdowns.

Banta May Play

Bob Suffridge, the All-American guard last year from Tennessee, will be back in the Eagle starting lineup after a two-week layoff with injuries. Jack Banta, late of the Redskins and one of the new backs the Eagles have been seeking, may make his debut against his old mates.

Lee Gentry, with the Redskins for only four practice sessions since being cut from the squad before completing the training trip, will be ready Sunday. One of the smartest backs on the squad, Gentry has fast picked up the plays and signal chances which he missed while with Long Island.

Estimates on the Washington fans going to Philadelphia Sunday have now reached 4000 as both the Redskins and Pennsylvania Railroad reported a brisk ticket sale. The Redskin band will lead the 10-minute march from the North Philadelphia Station to Shibe Park and at halftime the Skins will produce their All-American drum major, Eddie Sacks, who was a tremendous hit last week in Pittsburgh.

Coach Flaherty Ailing

For the first time this season every man on the Redskin squad of 33 is fit and ready while strangely Coach Flaherty is going through his duties with a taped back and his left arm in a sling. Bob Hoffman and Ken Dow, dressed but not ready for action last week, are all set for the Eagles.

Dow and Al Kreuger are now the only Redskins who have not yet played in one of the three league games.

Frank Filchock, outstanding individual star in the Redskin backfield thus far this season, will start with his usual mates.

The Redskins are on the spot tomorrow for the league leading Giants entertain the last-place Steelers and already boast a game and a half edge over the Washingtonians.

Hawse's String Of Setters Take Honors

Proof that the loyal English and Llewyllen setters are beginning to outshine pointers in the field trial game came at the National Capital Field Trials near Rockville yesterday, when Vergil P. Hawse's string of setters took major honors in two divisions.

In the derby stakes, Hawses Beau Essig's Ace, a black-and-white setter, outperformed a kennel-mate, Equitip, with third place going to A. K. Frank's pointer, Belle of Washington.

Because quail were scarce, dogs were judged on their running ability, and Hawse's representatives again came through in the all-age stake. This time the victor was Beau Essig's Don, who defeated Harvey L. Marcey's pointer, Santee Pilot Sam, from Arlington, Va. Third place was taken by Hawse's Zero.

The field trials will continue this afternoon at Mount Pleasant Farm, approximately halfway between Rockville and Potomac.

American University Seeks First Victory Against Hopkins

With Co-Capt. Carl Byham back in hte line-up, American University's eleven today will seek its first victory over Johns Hopkins in who can remember how many years? The game is scheduled for Woodrow Wilson High School Stadium at 2:15 p. m.

The Eagles, displaying a new formation, the "V," to the football world this season, have to date been disappointing, dropping games to Susquehanna, 6-0, and Swarthmore, 20-0, but they feel they have a victory coming over Johns Hopkins' Blue Jays.

Byham, out since before the season started with a broken cheek bone, returns to the line-up not at his old tackle position, but at end in the place of the injured Mac Potter. Regardless, the big senior's defensive ability will be welcomed by the Eagles. Byham is president of the student body and his presence on the field is an inspiration to his mates.

Hopkins is expected to be at full strength to continue its long rivalry with American University which surprised last year by holding the Baltimoreans to a scoreless tie. The Blue Jays lost a tongh one to Washington College last week, 6-0, but showed promise.

The Eagles' attack, heretofore punchless in the region of the opposition's goal line, may be considerably bolstered today by Russ Arnaud, a triple-threat freshman back who is scheduled to make his first start. Arnaud, a former Washington-Lee High School standout, has been sidelined with a dislocated shoulder.

Venezuela Defeats Cuba in Baseball

Miss Dorchester Captures Pigeon Race From Akron

James F. Mundle's Miss Dorchester won the last race of the young bird series, sponsored by the Capital City Racing Pigeon Club. Birds were released in Akron, Ohio, an airline distance of 290 miles from the District.

Eighty-nine birds from 13 local lofts made up the entry lists, with second and third places going to pigeons from the Coryell and Burke-Holmes lofts, which finished less than half a minute behind the winner.

Liberation was made at 7 a. m. and Miss Dorchester averaged almost 45 miles per hour for the trip.

The Owens-MacFarlane loft, which finished fifth in the last race, took the coveted average speed diploma for the entire series with an average speed of 1128.96 yards per minute for 1400 miles flown.

Rusty Takes Open Jumping At Fort Myer

By Anne Hagner

Making a fast-moving comeback after a year's retirement, the Government-owned Rusty, with Lieut. Peter Alfano up, scored a clean performance to take the officers' open jumping event at the informal Fort Myer Horse Show in the post riding hall last night.

Out of competition because of a hoof ailment, Rusty sped around the winding course like a steeplechaser for a performance that was the thrill of the evening for several hundred spectators.

The clean round, coupled with his half fault earned in the elimination trials the night before, put Rusty on top with half a fault for the two efforts. Lieut. Robert Dodderidge on another old-timer of Army jumping, clipped Wings, was scored with 1 fault for a combined score, with Capt. A. J. Boyle riding the other two ribbon winners, Reno with 1 fault and Black Beauty with 1½.

Wins Fourth Ribbon

Private Mullins, who has been riding only 3 months, made his fourth ribbon—this one a blue—in the outing for enlisted men with less than a year's service. He rode Troop F's Fulton to outpoint Private Carl Schilling, widely known show rider who enlisted recently. Schilling was mounted on Black Beauty.

Another representative of Troop F, Private Bennett, rode Fred over one of the evening's most complicated courses to win the enlisted men's open jumping over Sergt. Dobrozensky on Clipped Wings, under the colors of the First Squadron. Private Schilling, also from the First Squadron, was third on Black Beauty.

Natalie Sutherland triumphed in the ladies' horsemanship class, limited to wives and daughters of service personnel. Mounted on a chestnut 4-year-old, Virginia Jedran, she turned back Mrs. Boyle on Reno and Mrs. Forrest Sherman on My Lass.

Lieut. Fred Hughes, jr.'s Black Caddy, highest handicapped entry in the officers' jumping, was out of competition because of an influenza innoculation.

Maury High Bows, 12 to 6, To G. W. High

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Oct. 17.—The Virginia Class A Conference championship hopes of Maury High School's highly touted Commodores were rudely jolted by an alert and hard fighting George Washington High School eleven here tonight, as the Presidents struck twice with lightning-like swiftness early in the third quarter to turn back the favored Norfolk eleven, 12-6. A throng of 4000 fans saw the Alexandrians record their second conference victory in three starts.

Trailing 6-0 at the start of the second half, the Presidents scored all their points before the third quarter was three minutes old. Taking Maury's kickoff on their 34, they marched 66 yards to the first score, and only a minute after this score, they produced their second touchdown when Guard Henry Grimm smashed through the line, blocked Cloud's kick and ran 38 yards after taking the ball as it bounded off Cloud's foot.

Maury scored its only 6-pointer in sensational style when the game was only three minutes old. Rudiger threw a 30-yard pass to Bangs, who made a beautiful overhead catch on the 35 and outdistanced the Presidents to the goal. The G. W. line blocked Bangs' attempted placement for the extra point.

A series of passes from Noble Stewart to Curtis Kirby, Jack Beach and Marty Foltz featured the Presidents' first touchdown drive on the second half kickoff, and the sustained march was climaxed when Stewart passed 4 yards to Leon Chisholm, who wormed his way over from the 7-yard line.

After taking G. W.'s kickoff at the Maury 38, Maury was unable to gain, and Cloud dropped back to kick on third down. Grimm slashed through the line to block the ball as Cloud punted, and when he recovered the ball before it hit the ground he had a clear field to the goal line. Stewart again attempted to convert, but his kick was wide.

Emory and Henry Wins Over Union, 41-7

Emory, Va., Oct. 17. (AP)—Emory and Henry Wasps, on the rebound from two defeats suffered away from home, took it out on the hapless Union College Bulldogs here tonight to romp to a 41-7 victory on Fullerton Field.

Janitor hired within a few hours!

"Immediate results from my Post 'Help Wanted' ad!"— says Mrs. McMahon of 16th St. N.W.

Mrs. McMahon wanted a man with an engineer's license for general janitor work. She placed an ad in The Post's "Help Wanted" columns on a three-day schedule. But the results came in a very few hours! Before the first day was over she had hired a capable man who filled all requirements. Mrs. McMahon was then able to cancel the ad for the following two days!

TIME and time again, people who need employees in a hurry find The Post is the paper to use for immediate action. A good ad placed in the "Help Wanted" columns is often all that's necessary to locate a desirable applicant. They usually bring response from just the type of applicant desired—technical, sales, commercial, or domestic. Then you can pick out the really outstanding employee most likely to fill your requirements. Does this system work? Quite a few Washington employers will testify that it does!

Secure the capable help you need through The Post's Want Ads! It's the same method Mrs. McMahon found so successful. Post Want Ads cost little . . . but they do a man-size job of getting results. Simply call NAtional 4200 and ask for an ad taker. Tell her the kind of employee you want and she'll help you write an ad designed to get immediate results.

Central, Western and Wilson Win in Interhigh Series

Anacostia Bows, 7-0, To Vikings

Victors Strike Once In Second Quarter To Register Their 4th Victory in Row

INTERHIGH STANDINGS	W.	L.

One play, involving no more than ten seconds, decided an even battle between Central and Anacostia in the interhigh football series yesterday, the Vikings of Central grabbing a 7-0 victory before loaded stands at the losers' stadium.

That play gave the Vikings their fourth straight triumph of the season and ended the Indians' three-game winning streak. It left Central still atop the western section standings of the public school title race, and brought Anacostia's record in the eastern section to 1 and 1.

But most of all that big play in the second quarter hurt the Indians' opinion of their own chances. It took them a full period to recover, and then it was too late.

The play was set up completely by Central's Jack Samperton as the half-time whistle was about to blow. Wingman Ross, of Anacostia, pulled out to kick from his own 41, saw Samperton rush in and block the effort. The ball bounded over the sideline at the Anacostia 30 and there "it" happened.

Samperton Scores

Stan Valanos, veteran Viking fullback, dropped back and lobbed a perfect arrow over Frank Burback's head to Samperton, running full-tilt on the 10. Samperton took it over his shoulder, was never touched as he went over. By way of clinching things, Samperton then converted by placement.

Before and after that lightning stroke, however, there wasn't a shade of difference in the winners and their two-team opponents. Central missed its big plunging back, Jim Kurz, whose collarbone was shown to be broken by an X-ray. Anacostia operated during the second half without slim Dick Faircloth, first-string end, who was knocked unconscious in the kickoff following Central's touchdown.

The Indians, if nothing else, were credited with the longest sustained drive of the game. That started on their own 26 in the last period, moved in three quick aerial first downs featuring Bob Nolte, Paul Blaine, Elmer Leukhardt and Frank Burback to the Central 9. A pass which Hoffman slanted toward the flats, however, was snatched by the Vikings' Center Lavinder at that point and the threat died.

Valanos Fumles

Again by a split second the Indians were robbed of a chance to tie later in the quarter. Blaine's punt to Valanos was taken on the Central 34. Tackled hard by three charging Anacostians, Valanos fumbled and the ball was recovered by Burback—but a second after the whistle had stopped play.

At the end, on the strength of a Blaine pass which Mike Denikos stole on the losers' 45 and ran to the 14, the Vikings were again threatening.

Landon School Edges Out Coolidge, 6-0

Keeping their untied and unscored on record intact, Landon School gridders nosed out Calvin Coolidge on the Leland field yesterday, 6-0.

In winning their third victory of the year, the Landoners were forced to block a Coolidge kick to win. That came in the final stanza with the invaders backed up to their own 15.

"Porky" Herbst, Landon guard, swept through the line to block the punt, which bounded out on Coolidge's 6-yard line. A 5-yard penalty for offsides pushed the Colts back to their 1 and Walter Johnson went over. Cady's placement was wide.

Coolidge made numerous dire threats but each time failed to score. Just before the half it moved up to Landon's 1-yard marker, but there the ball was lost on downs. Again the Colts came on to the 10, tried a pass into the end zone, but it was a few feet outside.

Eastern High Beaten, 12-6, By Gonzaga

Gonzaga's passing attack hit the jackpot twice and gave the Eye Streeters a 12-to-6 victory over Eastern yesterday at the Eastern High School Stadium.

Just as in past performances, Eastern launched a power attack and rolled up three first downs the first time it got the ball. With only 30 seconds of the first period play the Easterners scored their first touchdown on an end around and double reverse from the 11-yard line, Right End Mel Thompson carrying the ball. Herby Adams' placement was short.

Gonzaga's first quarter attempts to crumble Eastern's forward wall proved futile. As the second quarter opened, Gonzaga seemed to find itself. Its running attack, featuring Ronny Waldron and Elmer Raba, brought the ball to Eastern's 16. Raba's first and second down passes missed, but his third attempt connected with Fullback Bernie Nolan for 6 points and a tie ball game. Raba's first attempted conversion was blocked but because of an offside penalty against Eastern he was given another chance which turned out to be unnecessary exertion for this time his line plunge was short.

The 6 points gave Gonzaga confidence and although the Purple didn't score in the third period, they chalked up four first downs.

No sooner had the fourth quarter opened than another pass from "Iron Man" Raba brought home the decisive 6 points. This time it was to Quarterback "Reds" Murphy who made a running, leaping catch, stealing the ball from the eager hands of Eastern's right halfback, Uckie Fearson. Raba's conversion kick went through the posts, but under the bar.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., Oct. 17.—A make-shift Charlotte Hall Military Academy team which had only two regulars in the starting line-up rolled over Woodward Prep at will here today to register the Cadets' second win of the year, 26-0.

The Washington team held the Cadets scoreless during the first quarter, but Charlotte Hall registered two quick scores in the final moments of the second period to take a half-time lead of 13-0.

Al Sondheimer, midget halfback, was the scoring leader of the day, going across the goal line three times and booting an extra point for a total of 19 points. On a reverse from Chuck Peters in the second quarter he ran 14 yards for a score. He raced 5 yards for his second score after a 65-yard drive at the half kickoff. His final tally came on an 8-yard smash off tackle.

W.-L. Trounces N.T.S., 32 to 7; Fourth Victory

Using substitutes freely, Washington-Lee High eleven swept to a 32-7 decision over National Training School yesterday at Arlington, accounting for its fourth straight triumph this season.

The Little Generals pushed over two touchdowns in the first period and were never headed, though N. T. S. cut their lead to 13-7 at the half. Jim Sprinkle, star fullback, rushed over to start W.-L. scoring and Grinnell added the second score on the most thrilling play of the game.

Intercepting an N. T. S. aerial on his own 30, Grinnell raced 70 yards to score.

The Trainers came back with a touchdown of their own in the second quarter. Halfback Connell scooped a pass from Bates out of the air and found the goal. Lofty's extra point on a line smash closed out the losers' point making.

In the last half W.-L., paced by stellar Eddie DeCelle, increased its lead comfortably. DeCelle rammed home two 6-pointers, and Reserve Smith a third to hold the scrappy N. T. S. eleven at bay.

Armstrong High Defeats Douglass, 28-0

Outclassing the opposition in all departments, the Orange and Blue of Armstrong High School yesterday defeated Douglass High, of Baltimore, at Brooks Stadium, 28-0.

An initial two points was made early in the game on a bad pass from center good for a safety. Kenny Freeman rushed the Douglass line a few plays later for the first touchdown.

Armstrong scored again as the second period began, a long pass by Day being grabbed on the run by Freeman and carried to the Douglass, 3, enabling Christian to go off right tackle for 6 points. Freeman dropkicked the extra point.

Both teams went scoreless in the third period, but Armstrong came on with a rush in the final, putting one touchdown across on a beautiful pass, Palmer to Day, and another on a rush over the line by Willie Washington, after Barnes had intercepted a Douglass pass, and run it back to the 1-yard line.

Calvert Hall Downed, 21-0, By St. John's

St. John's High eleven found its stride in the second quarter and romped to a 21-0 victory over Calvert Hall, of Baltimore, yesterday at Central Stadium.

After a scoreless first stanza, the Johnnies hit pay territory when Buddy Speiss' aerial to George Hughes from the 45 found its mark. Hughes romped across the goal and then made it 7-0 on a placekick.

The third quarter saw St. John's stage a long drive to boost their margin. Harold Krug was on the pay-off end from the three-yard line, and again Hughes converted. Finally, in the fourth quarter, tallying was wound up when Speiss hurled what developed as a 55-yard pass to Steve Byrns. That brought the ball to Calvert Hall's 30, from which point Billy Brogan tossed to Speiss for six points. Byrns' placement was good.

The Hallmen never were able to get inside St. John's 35-yard line, but the Johnnies helped their cause by tossing away two scoring opportunities. One reached the seven-yard line and the other reached the three.

Roosevelt 21-13 Victim Of Raiders

Western Hangs Up 14-0 Lead at Half; Riders Score Twice In Last Quarter

Taking advantage of two scoring opportunities and engineering a quick 50-yard thrust, Western High's Red Raiders licked the Roosevelt Rough Riders, 21 to 13, in a loose affair at the Raiders' Stadium yesterday.

The game developed into one of the weirdest frays seen in interhigh ranks this year and wound up with the Riders threatening to haul Western down from behind.

Western's first shot at the Riders' goal came early in the second quarter after Steve Silverman, Rider guard, personally halted a Rider thrust on his own 12 by bursting into a Western reverse and recovering a fumble. After the R Streeters held for three downs, Ed Widmyer and Roger Talbot collaborated in blocking a punt and putting Western in possession of the ball on the three. At this point it took three cracks at the stubborn Rider line before Bill Marlowe crashed over. Widmyer's conversion made the count 7-0.

With Roosevelt threatening to knot the score after a 60-yard jaunt to the Raiders' 15, Henry Pratti grabbed a Kolker pass on his own five and raced 95 yards down the boundary to put Western in possession of a 13-point lead. Widmyer made it 14-0 with a perfect placement.

Steve Valtoos started the Roosevelt scoring movement early in the last period. With the ball resting on the midfield, the 135-pound guard tore into the Raiders' backfield and blocked a punt that George Haines scooped up on the 48 and negotiated the remaining distance untouched to score. The conversion was blocked and the score stood 14-6.

The final Raider tally came on a 50-yard drive that opened with a 30-yard pass from Platti to Al Pappinicholas and ended with Platti tossing to Kuldell in the end zone for the score. Widmyer again converted.

With two minutes to play and the crowd fringing the field, Bill Garner heaved a 20-yard aerial to Irvin Lust who reversed his field and traveled 46 yards to score, completing a play that gobbled up 64 yards. Sturgis booted the point to bring the count to 21-13.

St. Albans Wins Over Hoya Prep, 32 to 14

The accurate arm of Earl Elliott and the all-around play of Lou Crawford led St. Albans gridders to their second victory in three games yesterday, a 32—14 judgement over Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park.

Elliott's contribution to the victory was three touchdown passes, good for a total of 92 yards. Crawford pulled in two of the aerials and scored a third time on a 1-foot drive through the middle of the line.

Georgetown Prep's number was up after the first period. The Saints amassed a 19—0 lead then and were never in trouble despite a pair of Little Hoya marches that netted two touchdowns in the last half.

The Saints' only failing was in the extra-point department, but that mattered little. Cromelin missed three placements for single points, leaving Denit and Bondy to make their only points by rushing.

The loss was Prep's first of the year, but hardly its first to St. Albans. It also bowed last season, 27—6.

Friends Wins Six-Man Game With Ease, 42-6

The six-man grid representatives of Sidwell-Friends School had very much their own way with Stuyvesant School, of Fairfax, yesterday in a game on the winners' field. Friends took the decision, 42-6, with a varied attack that accounted for points almost every conceivable way.

Friends went scoreless in the opening quarter, but made up for that in the second. Two touchdowns were scored, putting the hosts ahead for good.

Reserve Carter tallied the first 6-pointer when he was on the receiving end of a 45-yard pass from Delos Smith, one of two touchdowns he scored in that manner. Shortly thereafter another reserve, McCuen, took a reverse and tripped 5 yards for another touchdown.

Smith personally attended to two tallies on short line smashes. In addition, he passed to Pinck for one of the winners' extra points.

Hyattsville Wins Field Hockey Game

Betty Bennett led the Hyattsville High School team to victory over Bethesda-Chevy Chase field hockey players, 3—0, on the winners' field yesterday. Miss Bennett made a goal in the first and third quarter. The other Hyattsville tally was made by Marjorie McAuliffe in the third quarter.

Tech Loses Its Second Game, 7 to 0

Dick George Hero Of Victory With a 71-Yard Run; Saine Scores Touchdown

Fresh from its annual upset at the hands of Anacostia, Tech High's grid force ran into another and more stinging upset yesterday when it tangled with Woodrow Wilson in an interhigh series game at McKinley Stadium.

The Maroon was downed, 7-0, by an alert Wilson club which made the most of its one big break. It was Wilson's first major triumph since joining the public school family, and the loss virtually eliminated Tech from championship consideration this year. Last week the Trainers lost to Anacostia, 12-6.

It was Dick George, stocky quarterback of the Tigers, who made his team's victory possible. Breaking off tackle from his own 27 with about half of the final quarter remaining, George scrambled 71 yards before he was brought down by Ernie Morrisette on the 2-yard marker.

Saine Goes Over

There George, who has hidden his ball-carrying talents so far this year, turned the honor of scoring over to Fullback Charlie Saine. The latter needed one test plunge before finally plowing across the goal. "Tiny" Lamb, the Tigers' placement specialist, then came in and kicked the extra point.

In addition to George and Saine, laurels for the game also went to Charley Hardison, a vicious-tackling end, and Dick Schwab. It was Schwab's excellent punting which kept Tech's weighty line-up safely out of scoring territory.

Tech's whole offense and defense was wrapped up in Morrisette, a second-year man. Though strictly a placement expert until recently, the bulky star carried the ball, passed, kicked, tackled and blocked better than any of his mates.

Washington Faces Jackets Today

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 17 (AP).—Washington College, 6-0 victor over Johns Hopkins in an unimpressive first start, entertains Randolph-Macon, sister school of the Mason-Dixon Conference tomorrow in an effort to make it two in a row.

The Virginians, playing out of their class, have lost to William and Mary, Richmond and Florida in early season games, but boast a tough and experienced lineup and should prove a tough one for the Sho'men.

Bradley's Colt Returns $19.80

Takes Command With Stretch Rush To Beat Daily Trouble, Dollar Bay

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 17—It has not been often in recent years that Bradley Stable horses have run other than true to form but the green and white colors provided a startling form reversal here today. Bryan Station, a 3-year-old son of Balladier, turned a flip-flop this afternoon that just about won the championship for inconsistency. In his previous appearance on October 7, the records show that Bryan Station couldn't have beaten a billy goat. He finished ninth and there was some 16 lengths between him and the winner.

But today at $19.80 instead of 7 to 5, Bryan Station was a different horse or rather a much improved horse. He not only held a forward position from the start but he came with a stretch rush to take command and had enough left to hold a half length advantage over D. Straus' Daily Trouble at the end of the battle. Third money in the field of six went to Dixiana's Dollar Bay.

Young Pilots Winner

It is true that Bryan Station took off nine pounds today but he won in time of 1:44 2-5, only one-fifth over the time in which he was so thoroughly defeated ten days ago. Jockey Sterling Young, who is doing most of the Bradley riding now, was in Bryan Station's saddle in both of these races.

However, Bryan Station's sudden improvement was no more unexpected than the performance of Army Song. This one, winner of two races, set the pace for a half mile today and then stopped to last position.

Bryan Station was always well placed today. Jockey Young saved ground with him in the early stages. When Army Song quit Dollar Bay took command and appeared to be headed for victory in the early part of the stretch run. Then Bryan Station awoke. He ran like a wild horse, collared Dollar Bay and then withstood a closing rush of Daily Trouble.

Double Pays $37.50

After the telephone pay-offs of the last two days, the flood of daily double money subsided and an ordinary $37.50 mutuel was paid to an army of holders of ticket "3 and 6." Mrs. Chester A. Lyon's Sweeping Lee won the first race by a neck. The son of Mowlee stuck his head out and took the decision from Half Inch, a long shot. Snarleyow was third. Sweeping Lee paid $10.

The Laurel home folks celebrated in the third event when Becomly, owned by W. J. Susini, local "Mr. Eat," came between horses to win over Little Bolo and Zenana to pay $6.50.

SHIP EXECUTIVE was allowed to race on own course for turn of field, rallied when placed to drive, but hung on final flat. BAHAMA KNIGHT was forwardly placed from start, moved up menacingly and weakened. He pulled up lame. HAREM HONEY was closest to pace for mile and tired thereafter.

LITTLE BOLO lacked early speed, came out for racing room and closed full of run. ZENANA raced forwardly on inside to get to front in midstretch and tired gradually thereafter. UNKNOWN LAND, first away, set good pace, ran out entering stretch and was tiring at close.

CURIOUS ROMAN was well placed from start, rallied when shaken up and was best of others at end. EQUIPET raced wide and tired gradually through stretch. BOSCOR K. closed some ground. CASAD went to her knees and unseated rider leaving gate.

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al:

Good time strike, better time peace. It looked like a soft day for the racing scribes with the "no entries for tomorrow" sign hung out. I had a nice big paragraph written for this space about "Don't kill the goose that lays the golden egg" and this and that." Then what happens? The track and the horsemen settle their differences. So I have to tear it up and start over again. I'm glad the thing has worked out O. K. It is good that cool heads were around to take the rough edges off the controversy. The management and the horsemen were not far apart at any stage. All concerned were going to wind up loser. As this is written, I don't know who has won. But the whole thing was bad for racing. In the future the track and the horsemen should get together more often. Not to strike or freeze out, but to talk things over in a common sense way. BILL.

First race—IMPREGNABLE appears the best of the 2-year-olds gathered for the day's opener. Needs only to race back to that last. ERIC KNIGHT was beaten a nose in maiden company and is dangerous. WAR ART for the show end.

Second race—ITABO gets the call in this sprint. Should go right to the top and stay there. AARON BURR has speed and belongs close. MAROC looks like the third one.

Third race—The Shouse—Bryson entry of JOANNY and BUNNY BABY will be hard to beat in this event. Either could take the measure of these cheap ones. BALLAST REEF has plenty of foot and will be a factor. GLITTER GIRL for the show award.

Fourth race—LAST SOU with a feather assignment of 102 pounds, promises to doa lot of running and I'm going to string along. VAGRANCY has that fine last as a recommendation. UMBRIL closed with a rush last out.

Fifth race—ALSAB, 124 pounds and all, belongs on the top of this heat. The champion has worked sensationally and promises to run accordingly. COLCHIS probably will do the expected and be second. WAIT A BIT for the minor money.

Sixth race—SIR ALFRED surprised by leading good ones home in that recent outing. I look for him to come back to make it two in a row. CHOPPY SEA will close ground and is a threat. HE ROLLS to take care of the others.

Seventh race—The Circle M. Ranch entry of BIG PEBBLE and ALLESSANDRO deserve the call in this test, and I'll take either one. Both are fit as hands make horses. RINGIE likes this route and will be a keen factor. BIRCH ROD belongs close.

Eighth race—MILL END showed a fair effort in that recent race and I'm going to string along. BAR SHIP has been prominent of late and is dangerous. JIAN ASBESTOS probably will be in the money.

Best bet—ALSAB.

His first work with the company was in the application of the gyroscope to certain early naval and aeronautical problems. Later Patterson was transferred to searchlight engineering, serving in this department for ten years. In 1929 he transferred to the company's sales division and since that time has acted in Washington as manager of the Federal department.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 17 (AP).—Mill buying was credited with the recovery today in cotton futures, stimulating prices 31 to 41 points higher.

Some speculative purchasing orders were believed based on reports that farm products may be omitted from the Federal price control bill in its final form.

The October contract expired at noon and trading in cotton for delivery in October, 1942, will begin tomorrow.

Today's advance wiped out about half of yesterday's losses, which came in the biggest volume for a single session since the Commodity Exchange Administration began keeping records in October, 1937. Today's trade was believed sharply under yesterday's 347,000 bales.

Normal Meat Price Relationships Go Awry As U. S. Buys Pork, Shies Away From Beef

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 17.—A slice of roast beef costs little, if any, more today than it did last year, but if you want a pork chop you'll have to put out considerably additional money for it.

Pork prices . . . Soaring

Why? Two factors — Government pork and lard buying plus record cattle production—have combined to create some startling changes in normal meat price relationships, livestock men say.

Federal buying began about mid-March. From March 15 to September 30, Department of Agriculture figures showed today, the Government purchased 220,288,879 pounds of lard, 122,931,224 pounds of canned pork and 193,859,500 pounds of cured and frozen pork.

What this means to the average consumer is illustrated best by statistics on American per capita consumption, as compiled by the Agriculture Department. Last year each American's apparent consumption averaged 14.7 pounds of lard and 72.8 pounds of pork.

Thus enough pork already has been purchased by the Government to meet the annual requirements, based on last year's consumption, of more than four million Americans, and enough lard for about 14 million.

These purchases were made for the Red Cross, domestic and war refugee relief and, easily most important of all in the opinion of livestock men, for lease-lend shipments to Great Britain. Total meat exports in July were 85,478,000 pounds, of which less than 7 per cent was beef and the remainder pork and lard.

Buying of beef has been small, usually cheaper cuts, and apparently is for domestic relief rather than lend-lease purposes, livestock circles say.

While the Government has been supporting the hog market, cattle killed under Federal inspection in September passed the one million mark for the first time since 1936. For the year to date 7,881,950 head of cattle have gone to market compared with 7,046,671 last year.

Beef prices . . . Steady

Slaughter of hogs, from which pork and lard is derived, has shown an opposite trend. For the year to date killings number 32,034,778 head, against 34,432,842 last year.

The result is shown in what you pay for a pork chop and a slice of roast beef compared with last year.

Fresh pork loins are selling wholesale in Chicago today at about 18 to 23 cents a pound, against 14 to 18 cents a year ago. This is a gain of nearly 30 per cent. Similar increases have been recorded elsewhere.

Dressed beef prices have moved mainly in the opposite direction. Yearling ribs are quoted wholesale today in Chicago at 23 cents a pound against 25 cents last year, while loins are at 30 cents against 34 cents.

These conflicting price trends, considered very unusual by livestock men, naturally are carried over into the retail cost of roast beef and pork chops.

Butter vs. Oleo Dispute Stirs Bitterness

By the Associated Press

Controversy between advocates of butter and oleomargarine has, in the opinion of Representative Mundt (Republican), South Dakota, done "more to stir up bitterness between the North and South than anything" since the War Between the States.

The trouble started, according to Mundt, when the Agriculture Department in a radio broadcast urged use of oleo instead of butter and called attention to new Federal standards permitting oleo to be "dressed up" so as to resemble butter.

"Secretary Wickard and Paul V. McNutt, food and drug administrator, may have won the esteem of many oleomorgarine makers," Mundt said in a statement, "but farmers north of the Mason-Dixon Line are invading Washington with wrath in their eyes and malice in their hearts."

The House Agriculture Committee is now considering two proposals, one by Northern Congressmen, the other by Southern.

The Northerners have proposed a prohibition on interstate shipment of "any product colored to look like butter." Several Southern Congressmen have introduced bills which would eliminate the tax on oleomargarine altogether and "remove the penalty on coloring oleo so it will resemble butter."

Crude Oil Supplies Continue Downward

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum at the close of the week ended October 11 totaled 243,571,000 barrels, a net decrease of 2,573,000 barrels compared with the previous week. Stocks of domestic oil decreased 2,528,000 barrels for the week and foreign crude decrease 45,000 barrels.

Daily average production for the week was 4,071,000 barrels or an increase of 210,000 barrels compared with the previous week's level. Runs to stills average 4,075,000 barrels daily, compared with 4,015,000 barrels for the preceding week.

Builders of Army Camps Must Pay Oil Taxes

New Orleans, Oct. 17 (AP).—The Louisiana Supreme Court ruled today that petroleum products used by contractors in construction of Army camps on "cost plus fixed fee" contracts with the Federal Government were subject to State taxes.

The decision reversed a ruling of the lower court of District Judge Charles A. Holcombe, who held that the tax would be equivalent of assessing the Federal Government and therefore was illegal.

Acceptances Drop 21 Million in Week

New York, Oct. 17 (AP).—Bankers' acceptances outstanding September 30 dropped to $176,801,000 from $197,472,000 August 31 and held just above the $176,614,000 outstanding at the end of September, 1940, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported today.

All-Feminine Panel Debates Ship Arming

Theodore Granik, father and moderator of the "American Forum of the Air," gave birth to the idea. Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the former Governor of Pennsylvania, declared the Neutrality Act was "up Hitler's alley."

Speaking of provisions forbidding arming of merchant ships, carrying cargoes to belligerents and entering combat zones, "each is worth a fleet and a dozen divisions to me," she asserted.

Florence Brewer Boeckel, writer and pacifist, said that by repeal the act Congress would give up its Constitutional right to determine the question of war or peace.

"Until Congress is ready to declare war," she said, "it should not repeal the neutrality law and thereby put into the hands of the executive the power to make a decision which Congress itself is responsible under the Constitution."

Declared Mrs. Raymond Clapper, wife of the newspaper columnist: "We are dedicated to the overthrow of Hitler and the Nazi Party. Anything that our military experts advise how to that end should be done with all haste . . . If Great Britain does not have the shipping bottoms and the convoy strength to assure her supplies getting over to the besieged Island then we must supply them."

Mrs. Mundt Disagrees

Mrs. Carl Mundt, wife of the noninterventionist representative from South Dakota, asserted that arming merchant ships and sending them to belligerent ports "is perhaps the fatal and final step that will lead us into the horrible slaughter now raging in Europe."

Drawing a parallel, she noted that the United States' entry into the World War followed arming of merchant ships by two months.

"It is interesting to note in this connection," she said, "that the man who was in the vanguard in the matter of arming merchant ships was Franklin Roosevelt, the same man who is now driving through Congress a similar policy."

Mrs. Genevieve Herrick, former president of the Women's National Press Club, was moderator of the forum, which was broadcast over station WHN in New York City. A transcription later was broadcast over WOL, Washington.

The forums will be held every Friday night at the Mayflower.

Day-and-Night Ocean Flights Are Forecast

A prediction that war aviation experience woud enable the peacetime establishment of "day and night" air service across the Atlantic was made last night by William Courtenay, British aviation journalist and former R. A. F. flyer, at a dinner meeting of legislators, diplomats and aviation officials at the Cosmos Club.

The development of long-range bombing planes and the experience with frequent distance flights would bring this about, he declared, and as a result "aviation will play a vital role in binding up the wounds of the world" when peace comes.

However, the United States and England must command the air over the Atlantic, he asserted, before victory and peace can come. He urged a principal need for long-range fighter planes to combat bomber attacks on convoys.

Courtenay was asked by a member of the audience of about 60 for an opinion on the establishment of a separate air force here, on the basis of Britain's experience with the autonomous R. A. F. but declined to express himself directly other than to say that the decision must be based on American strategic needs rather than British experience.

He added, however, that the trend in England seemed to point more toward division, rather than centralization of the air forces. He pointed out that the Royal Navy was given its own air fleet shortly before the war, and that the army was now seeking closer and closer collaboration with the R. A. F.

Courtenay was introduced by Sir Willmott Lewis, head of the British Press Service, and guests at the dinner included Vladimir Hurban, Czech Minister, John Ciechanowski, Polish Ambassador, Supreme Court Justice Black, and representatives of the Senate, House, Civil Aeronautics Administration, and Army Air Corps.

British Morale Still Good, AP Editors Told

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 17.—Tom Yarbrough, Associated Press reporter fresh from two years of duty amid the bombs and bustle of London, reported to-that British morale was good.

"I have never seen a sign of defeatism," he stated at the annual meeting of the Associated Press Managing Editors Association.

He added that there were some indications of war "weariness" but opined they were the natural result of people going without some of the things they wanted during the war.

Yarbrough, who returned from England this week, said food stocks were increasing, and none was going hungry, but there was a shortage of some goods.

Peaches, 75 Cents Each

He related that you could buy a fresh peach for 75 cents, if you could find one; that shoe strings and combs required a bit of shopping; that you bought any brand of cigarettes you could get; that you stood in line to buy tickets to a movie at prices ranging from 60 cents to $2.

Yarbrough, who once was blown down a flight of steps when he sought shelter from a bomb in a doorway, reported that most people in London went on with their work during raids.

Basil L. Walters of the Minneapolis Star-Journal and Tribune was elected chairman of the association for the ensuing year. He succeeds Neil Swanson of the Baltimore Evening Sun.

Kent Cooper Speaks

Earlier the newspaper executives heard discussions of the operations of the Associated Press by General Manager Kent Cooper, Executive News Editor Byron Price, Brian Bell, chief of the Washington bureau; Paul R. Mickelson and W. F. Caldwell, news editors at Kansas City and Atlanta respectively; F. A. Resch, newsphoto editor; J. M. Kendrick, special news service editor; M. J. Wing, feature editor, and J. M. Roberts, foreign news editor.

Association members who addressed the meeting on news and picture coverage of events were Frank S. Hoag of the Pueblo Star-Journal and Chieftain, J. H. Torbett of the Utica Press, B. M. McKelway of the Washington Star, Roy Roberts of the Kansas City Star; James P. Rosemond, of the Akron Beacon Journal and David Patten of the Providence Evening Bulletin.

Police, Fire Surgeons Open Parley in D. C.

Speeches on defense organization, medical technique and medical aspects of police work yesterday marked the opening of the twentieth annual convention of the International Association of Police and Fire Surgeons and Medical Directors of Civil Service Commissions at the Hotel Willard.

Dr. William M. Doody, of Jersey City, president of the group, gave the first address to the gathering of about 45 on "The Policeman as a Mental Hygienist."

Citing the large percentage of physical and mental defects found among criminals and juvenile delinquents, Dr. Doody urged that "scientific study and treatment" be added to "legal and institutional" crime control.

He recommended that police "social work" be extended, to build healthier relationships between law officers and youngsters and to help improve the physical and mental health of potential juvenile criminals.

Other speakers at the day-long meeting included Dr. James A. O'Keefe, District police surgeon, who spoke briefly on civilian defense organization here; Dr. Maxwell Cherner, Philadelphia fire surgeon; Dr. Carl H. Schulte, Detroit fire surgeon; Dr. John P. Turner, Philadelphia police surgeon; Dr. Samuel B. Hadden, consulting neurologist of the Philadelphia department of public safety; Dr. Lewis C. Manger, jr., assistant surgeon in the same department, and Dr. Hubley R. Owen, Philadelphia director of public health.

A dinner at the hotel closed the day's activities, and the convention will begin its final day with two more talks on technical medical problems at 10:30 a. m. today. A round table discussion of "police, fire and civil service topics" is scheduled for 12:30 p. m. and a business session with eletcion of officers at 12:45 p. m. will conclude the convention.

Listen! with Glynn

When you hear Ted Husing over WJSV and the Columbia network this afternoon, describing the Navy-Cornell football game from Baltimore, it will sound like an easy two and a half hours of work, the way Mr. Husing does it.

But you should know that that very ease of Mr. Husing comes from many, many hours of hard work and research. A good estimate would be that Husing puts in at least 50 hours of study and observation preparing for each of his football broadcasts. His work, and that of his assistant, Jimmy Dolan, starts on the Monday before the contest and doesn't end until after game time.

As soon as the C. B. S. selects the game to be covered, Husing and Dolan set to work acquainting themselves thoroughly with the personnel of the rival teams. For hours they pore over charts and statistics giving the heights, weights, preparatory schools, sports records and what have you, of the various young heroes concerned. Then, two or three days before the game, the C. B. S. reporters visit the scene of the battle. They spend more hours watching the home team work out and later the visiting group. They talk ad infinitum with the rival coaches, getting "inside dope" on new plays.

Then they return to their hotel and spend four or five hours fixing up their "annunciator," the special signal box invented by them to follow the plays.

And, if this sounds easy, it isn't meant to.

Contract Bridge

A rather weird use of the "short" club bid was made on today's hand by Al Roth, of Washington. Though holding a perfectly good four-card diamond suit, he chose to open the bidding on the ace and one club. His partner, Oscar Brotman, also of Washington, did a little peculiar calling of his own on a three-card spade suit. But then, any player's bidding is liable to be a little strange when his team is down 3800 points, against the star's foursome captained by Waldemar von Zedtwitz.

Despite the bidding, the Washington champions slid into as tight a three no-trump contract as we have ever seen. All they needed to win the hand was a break in two suits or a favorable defense.

Here is what Roth says of the deal he played against A. Mitchell Barnes, of Atlanta, and Edward Hymes, who, eventually took home the sterling cups for victory:

"This hand occurred in the quarter-finals of the masters' team of four. At the time we were 3800 points behind and desperate measures had to be taken; thus the unnatural bidding.

"In order for this hand to be made it must receive a diamond or a heart lead. Then we must get a diamond and heart break in order to make three heart tricks, four diamonds and two aces. Although the diamonds did not break, Mr. Hymes released a diamond honor, leaving a tenace for me to capture all the diamond tricks. Thus we were able to pick up 700 points on this hand."

The opening lead was the heart nine, which went to declarer's jack. He continued the heart suit and Hymes won, his ace over dummy's king, returning the jack of spades. The ace won in dummy and the nine of diamonds was led; Hymes split his honors here, unfortunately, and declarer won with the diamond ace. Roth cashed the diamond king, and West's failure to follow placed the remaining cards of the suit. He entered dummy with the heart queen, played a low diamond through East, finessing the seven.

The queen of diamonds, the last heart and the club ace made up the remainder of the nine tricks. Roth lost only a heart, two spades and a club.
